Around the World
Remembering the Wife
The Baby Queen
A British Wonder

—By Arthur Brisbane—

"AROUND the World in Eighty Days" was Jules Verne's dream of what might be. Around the world in 21 days is the accomplishment of Dr. Eckener and German engineering skill.

To mention those figures in scientific achievement is like mentioning 10 billion dollars in Wall Street. No need to enlarge on the figures.

Sir Philip Snowden, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the Labor government, sets an example to other husbands that many will not follow. He won his fight for what he considered "financial justice to England," making dear Allies to give to Britain millions of German reparations that those Allies expected to keep for themselves.

Snowden telephoned to a London newspaper: "If England's pleased, so am I. Without the help of my wife I could never have achieved it."

One hundred and seventy-five thousand Americans saw little Gloria Matthews, aged three, of Lakewood, N. J., win the crown as Queen of American babies at Asbury Park.

But remember that the baby lacking the curliest hair, pinkest cheeks, fattest little legs may be later on, a champion human being in spite of missing the champion baby championship.

Voltaire was a sickly baby with fits. Pope, the poet, had to be sewn up in a stiff canvas jacket each morning that he might sit up and write.

Byron had a club foot. Napoleon had epileptic fits.

It's the brain that counts and often a child with a highly developed brain drawing the blood away from the rest of the body makes a poor showing at first, but lives to rule all the champion babies.

Cyrus H. K. Curtis sends you the information, carefully copyrighted, that one big British prison is sold, to be used for other purposes, 23 other prisons are closed, crime is decreasing.

The interesting thing is that they haven't got prohibition in Britain.

Britain's average daily prison population, which was 20,000 in 1904, is now only 11,000 and "there is also a remarkable drop in convictions for drunkenness." How do the British do it?

National Prohibition authorities tell New York police to close the speak-easies, saying "it is the business of the police to suppress nuisances."

Commissioner Whalen of New York's police says it is the national government's business to compel obedience to the constitution of the United States.

Meanwhile there are, according to police testimony, 32,000 speak-easies running night and day. That is not what was expected of prohibition.

Lieut. Bolster seems to be a young American at home in the air. It was something new in the world of flying when he stepped from the dirigible Los Angeles on to a flying airplane above the Cleveland airport, with 100,000 watching.

More important to flying was the demonstration of the Spanish professor, Juan De La Cievra. He landed his "Autogyro" gently, easily and safely on a 20-foot circle in the center of the field.

To control landing speed, making dangerously high speed and enormous landing fields unnecessary, is to improve aviation.

More mergers, with business always bigger. The People's Savings and Trust Co. unites with the Pittsburgh Trust Co. and the People's Pittsburgh Co. creating an $80,000,000 concern.

Children seeing a skyrocket going up, up, up, wonder when it will stop and come down.

Children of Wall Street looking at prices sailing upwards as children look at skyrockets, wonder when prices will start coming down.

"What will signalize a decline?" Wall Street asks, meaning how shall we be able to know when the rocket turns and starts definitely downward.

Wall Street's children never can know, for sure. Rockets starting from earth have definite supply of powder pushing, and can go only so far.

Wall Street starts skyrocketing, ammunition is added to the upward flight every little while, big crops, greater, cheaper quantity production, and the rocket goes higher.

The best plan is to buy what you can pay for, don't gamble, keep your head out of reach of the stick when it comes down.

Dr. Dowling Calls Death an 'Accident;' No Criminal Blame Is Attached

Mrs. Rachael Watson, 40, of Standard st., Mattapan, was killed at Boston City Hospital yesterday by a dose of acid she had requested and also ministered, there in the belief that it was a harmless medicine.

Dr. John C. Dowling, superintendent of the hospital, revealed the accident today, following an autopsy by Medical Examiner Timothy Leary.

A hospital pharmacist has been suspended and the police are investigating.

Mrs. Watson, wife of John Watson, entered City Hospital August 21 suffering from myxedema, a gland disease. She was discovered to have heart trouble and another disease.

ACID PROVES FATAL

For the latter she was given a special test, first taking 100 drams of dextrose.

On Wednesday she was to be given another test of the same kind and her physician ordered from the City Hospital pharmacist a dose of the dextrose.

The dose delivered was administered and Mrs. Watson became severely ill. Yesterday she died.

Supt. Dowling notified Medical Examiner Leary who performed an autopsy, discovering oxalic acid to have been the cause of death.

Had she been perfectly healthy the dose of acid would have killed her, Dr. Leary said.

Inspector James Dennessy of the homicide bureau was detailed to the investigation.

A "HUMAN MISTAKE"

Dr. Dowling explained the circumstances of the case to Mrs. Watson's husband. Either the bottle containing the acid had been wrongfully labeled in the pharmacy or somebody had poured acid into a bottle of dextrose. The dextrose is in powder form, the acid in crystal.

Dr. Leary said:

"It's a human mistake that fortunately never has happened before at that institution. No criminal responsibility is to be attached to anyone. It is an accident that an hospital over a long period of years can hope to avoid."

Arabs Kick Victims of Raid on Hiron; British Soldier Die in Clashes

Jerusalem, Aug. 30 (AP)—The Jewish Telegraphic Agency correspondent here today reported receipt of reports that the town of Safed, which was attacked by Arabs, was in flames. Safed has a population of about 8500, of whom 5400 are Moslems and 2900 Jews.

New York, Aug. 30—Details of Arab atrocities were received here today in a cable gram from Dr. S. Margoshes editor of The Day, leading Jewish publication in the Near East.

Dr. Margoshes reported that in an Arab raid on Hebron, when 15 American students were killed, the

SHOTS FIRED IN CLAM BATTLE

A thrilling battle in Quincy bay between clam diggers and coast guardsmen, in which knives, clubs and oars figured and shots were fired, was revealed today when 16 men and boys were arraigned in Quincy court.

Six clam diggers escaped after their motorboat had rammed the coast guard patrol, according to Coast Guard Officer Daniel Ellis. He said federal indictments will be sought against two of them for assault at sea.

According to Ellis, 22 men and boys were discovered digging clams on the prohibited flats off the Victory plant, Quincy, by a patrol from the Point Allerton station. As the patrol boat approached the diggers tumbled into two boats and fled.

The patrol boat pursued the larger of the two craft, containing 12 men, but on drawing near was rammed by the clam diggers' boat.

'Mystery' Bundle Found in Harbor

The "mysterious bundle" thrown into Fort Point channel last night by three men was recovered today by the harbor police after they had dragged with two boats for nearly two hours.

It contained two old paint cans and a lot of waste paper. A New Haven railroad special officer who scented a "murder" when he saw three men carry the bundle to the water's edge and throw it in, reported the matter to the police.

Steamer Struck in Darkness Off San Francisco Goes Down in 5 Minutes

San Francisco, Aug. 30 (AP)—Radio advices from rescue ships indicated that 74 persons may have perished with the sinking of the coastwise passenger vessel San Juan 30 miles south of here early today.

Officers of the Los Angeles & San Francisco Navigation Co., owners of the San Juan, announced that their latest information showed that there were 65 passengers aboard the vessel when she collided with the Standard Oil tanker S. C. Dodd in a thick fog at midnight. The crew of the San Juan numbered 45.

There were conflicting reports as to the number rescued. Aboard the Dodd were 27 of the San Juan's passengers and crew. Nine others had been picked up by the steamer Munami, which was still at the scene of the collision at 8 a. m. One report said there were four other survivors aboard the motorship Frank Lynch, but this could not be confirmed.

Radio stations here reported that the Munami had removed its

U. S. DIRIGIBLE LOS ANGELES SALUTES HIM

Dramatic Touch in Reception Before 'Paper Storm' Parade Up Broadway

New York, Aug. 30—Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, received [illegible] Only a official handshake of greeting this afternoon.

It was a gray day, but there was no gloom in the uproarious reception to the sky conqueror received in spite of the Hearst-Zeppelin round the globe flight in three weeks.

There was a melodramatic touch when the United States Navy dirigible Los Angeles, enroute from Cleveland, Ohio, to its home port at Lakehurst, flew over the municipal flag Macom, while the boat was carrying Dr. Eckener from Jersey City to the Battery.

As the Los Angeles hovered over the Macom, the dirigible's pilot dipped the hull in salute.

Dr. Eckener, who wore his uniform, stood upon the deck of the Macom and looked with interest upon this aerial demonstration. It was a reunion, in fact, for Dr. Eckener piloted the Los Angeles over the Atlantic some five or six years ago when it was a Zeppelin

BOSTON'S TAX RATE REDUCED

Boston's tax rate for 1929 will be $28, a reduction of 80 cents over last year, Mayor Nichols announced today.

This is the third consecutive tax rate reduction to be announced by the mayor, the first having occurred in 1927 when a cut of $1.80 was made, and last year the rate was reduced $1.20.

According to the mayor's statement, one of the most interesting features of this year's rate is the fact that appropriations and assessments for 1929 show a net increase of $2,228,770.04 over similar requirements for 1928.

Deductions made by the assessors in computation of the rate show an increase of $3,068,261.73 over similar deductions in 1928.

Important items entering into this increase, according to the mayor, are the gain of $1,064,853.60 in the cash surplus of the city, the increase of $1,026,766.55 in the city's share of the income tax distribution, and the deduction of $564,000

15 PASSENGERS MADE ENTIRE CRUISE

Von Wiegand Gives Highlights of Ship's World-Circling Conquest

EXCLUSIVE

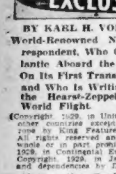
Aboard the Graf Zeppelin, at Lakehurst, Aug. 30—We are home.



Karl H. Von Wiegand

The earth has been circumnavigated by an airship. The Hearst-Zeppelin Round - World Flight has made history.

We have circled the globe in 21 days, 5 hours and 35 minutes. We have established a new world's record for global "sky larkers." Of that time, four days were spent in Friedrichshafen, three and three-quarter days in Japan and 19 hours in Los Angeles, approximately nine days.

Our actual time in the air was 11 days and 23 hours.

We made a record for crossing the Atlantic of 42 hours and 42 minutes from New York to the Lizard Light at Land's End, England, and from New York to Paris in 47 hours, that will not soon be broken. We blazed the first airline from Western Europe to the eastern-most rim of Asia, through Russia and bleak Siberia, and made the first non-stop flight from Berlin to Tokio in the astounding short time of 93 hours and 40 minutes, another record that promises to be hard to lift.

We crossed two oceans and three continents. We conquered the Pacific. We flew from Tokio to San Francisco through storm and fog in 68 hours and a few minutes.

We had but one small accident, which caused only slight delay. We also had a cross-hangar wind in design preventing us from leaving the dock for 19 hours.

LIKE A DREAM

This is exclusive of the one extra day in Friedrichshafen for lighter-ing the cover of the Graf, which really should have been done in Lakehurst before our start. It cost us one day, but does not really come under the heading of "repairs."

The Hearst-Zeppelin Round-World Flight was the greatest practical venture of the age.

At the same time it is the most sensational aerial travel success in history. The lessons learned in this pioneer air voyage will prove invaluable to the science of aviation. Improved types of air will give long distance and transoceanic air travel will be immeasurably.

As I looked down yesterday from the clouds and saw the trim white-clad sailors of our ship ready to land us, it seemed like a dream. I was somewhat dazed. Another constructive engineering genius German daring and the no less daring and confidence of William Randolph Hearst in financing the flight, made this dream a reality—one which humanity will learn and benefit.

It was a marvelous flight—a fiction-like experience, that the 19 passengers—18 men and one woman, have had.

BEST OF ALL SCENES

Our most impressive moments, were I believe, in Siberia, when three times the Graf was encircled by a wonderful rainbow and once with a strange halo or aureole, and the sunset as we saw it from above San Francisco. To this I personally should add the silent knowledge that I spent a night and just before dawn on the bridge and in the navigation room, unforgettable hours.

It would be difficult to say, as we saw from above, which was the city, Berlin, Tokio, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago or New York or Detroit, that met us in the heartiest greetings. Each was different.

Tokio was impressive by the silent sea of the vast multitudes on the streets and housetops, with their faces turned up to us.

San Francisco and its surroundings—Berkeley, Oakland, Alameda, gilded by the setting sunrayons the most beautiful picture that we saw on the entire flight, in fact, that I have so far seen from the air. Officers on the bridge and in the navigation room, and the passengers crowding the windows in the lounge—all seemed almost awed by the extraordinary beauty of that scene.

Chicago gave us the greatest and wildest demonstration of joy and enthusiasm of seeing the Graf, of all cities. To us, looking on the masses of waving humanity and hearing in the crescendo of sirens and whistles, it seemed that the city was delirious with enthusiasm.

LAUDS PASSENGERS

New York's welcome was scarcely second to Chicago in noise volume and in hearty cheers as we swung over the "finishing line" at the Statue of Liberty. From Los Angeles to New York, it was a triumphal parade where ever we passed over city or town.

Fifteen passengers—14 men and one woman, Lady Drummond Hay—made the flight entirely round the globe. Several others want only as far as Friedrichshafen, three from Friedrichshafen to Tokio and three others from Tokio to Los Angeles.

There were four "pay passengers," who paid $9,000 each for the privilege of being on the Graf Zeppelin on this remarkable world flight. They are W. B. Leeds, Joachim Rickard, both Americans; Dr. Geronimo Megias of Madrid, and Lieut.-Col. Christof Iselin of Switzerland. The rest of the passengers were writers, photographers and two American naval officers, Lieut.-Comdr. Chas. E. Rosendahl and Lieut. Jack C. Richardson.

LEEDS MOST POPULAR

Each passenger had a personality or individuality peculiar to himself. They all were "characters." No others would go on such a romantic adventure. "Billy" Leeds was perhaps the most popular of all. His geniality, limitless good humor and pleasing manners contributed much to keeping everybody in good spirits. Underneath his bantering tones lies a serious nature that one would not suspect and not be likely to reveal itself except on such an adventure as this.

Joachim Rickard, who was vetoed and only let on the Graf an hour before the start of the Hearst-Zeppelin flight, turned out to be a splendid fellow.

Baron von Perckhammer, air and press photographer, our "Tyrolean wild man," insisted on wearing "shorts"—trousers that come only half-way between hips and knees—and a funny little jacket, even when we were near the Arctic Circle in Siberia.

51,000 FEET OF FILM

Christof Iselin, an ex-lieutenant colonel of the Swiss army, apparently around 70 years old, was the most indefatigable note-taker and amateur photographer on board.

M. Gerville-Reache, the official representative of France, brought a touch of Paris into our circle with polish and suavity of manner. Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins, British explorer of the two Americas, was one of the most outstanding characters in our party. "I like those quiet eyes of his," remarked Dr. Eckener to me one day.

Robert Hartmann, silent, quiet-working cameraman, won the admiration of all by his diligence. He took more than 51,000 feet of film for the pictorial story of the great flight and hundreds of photographs.

A Run Around the Earth -:- By T. E. Powers

Von Wiegand's Tribute to Eckener and Aides

Karl H. von Wiegand, famous Hearst correspondent who circled the world on the Graf Zeppelin, highly praises the airliner and her officers. He says:

"The Hearst-Zeppelin flight around the world was a great success, a rare achievement, because the Graf Zeppelin is a splendid ship and because it was handled and directed by the most experienced staff of airship men in the world.

"With more than 3000 flights to the credit of Dr. Eckener, over 2000 to Capt. Lehmann, and more than 1000 each for Capts. Fleming and Von Schiller, there is not another group of men in the world with that wealth of practical experience. I have urged Dr. Eckener to open a training school for future officers of airships."

3 MORE TOWNS HIT BY DROUTH

To the score or more municipalities whose water supply has been seriously affected by the drouth, the state department of public health today added the names of Dunstable, Northfield and Russell.

These last three towns, X. H. Goodnough, chief of the sanitary division of the health department, said today, have not specifically asked for authority to take additional water, but are requesting advice.

Engineers of the division, he said, were today detailed to look over the situation and no action will be taken until they have made their reports.

ears and noses of the victims were cut off by the Moslem raiders.

He said the American consul in Jerusalem had advised all Americans to leave the country. Departure at present, though, he said, was attended by great danger.

In describing the Hebron massacre he said:

"I had a talk with De Koven, one of the American students who was previously reported dead. He said he saw his student friends killed and their ears and noses cut off. Women, trying to save their children, threw them from balconies alive.

"Mothers died horrible deaths. Excitement bordering on panic was felt among the Jews."

Of outrages in an attack on Motza, Dr. Margoshes said:

"In one place a father and mother were shot down as they rushed out of their home. The Arabs then entered the house and demolished everything in it.

"Rabbi Zaimon Schach and Rabbi Clatzer, who were approaching the house, were killed on the spot. The house was burned down after being looted.

"The Arabs fired on the Jews when they went out to bring in their dead."

Ten British Soldiers Slain in Arab Battle

Jerusalem, Aug. 30—Ten British soldiers were killed in renewed fighting on the outskirts of this city today as the crisis approached in the racial conflict between Jews and Arabs throughout the entire Near East.

Reports of serious clashes between British soldiers and raiding Moslems were received from several sources. These reports upset hopes here that the backbone of the uprising had been broken by the influx of British troops.

Twelve Arabs are reported to have been killed at Surbaher and Lifta when the English forces battled raiders in efforts to recover loot seized in attacked Jewish towns.

Fourteen Jews were killed and 20 wounded in the town of Safed when Arabs attacked the community and battled troops on duty there.

A grave situation is reported to have developed in Thecua where the Arabs were restless. Today 13 British planes flew over this city watching out for further disturbances.

More than a dozen young American students, members of a cycling group traveling through Syria, are reported as imperiled on the Palestine-Syrian frontier, where a powerful Arab band is concentrating.

New fighting is reported to have broken out at Acre, 95 miles northwest of here, and extra British troops have been rushed there to reinforce those already on the scene.

An official communique issued today said civil authorities had dispersed 1500 Bedouins massed at Beihh. Seventy Arabs were captured at Qualonia after repeated attacks on the Jewish colony at Motza.

'EFFICIENCY' DERBY AT AIR RACES TODAY

for Endurance Record

Oklahoma Woman Flier Out at Cleveland

Cleveland, Aug. 30 (AP)—An "efficiency" derby to Buffalo and return, two long-distance derbies, closed course races for men and women, and a solo endurance flight held the attention of spectators at the National air races today.

The flight to Buffalo and back was planned to test the efficiency of various types of planes in speed, fuel consumption, handling and relative adaptability to flying conditions met in the race. A number of manufacturers had entered their planes.

Officials announced that the Kim-ot Ohio derby, twice postponed because of difficulties in arranging plane classifications and for lack of entrants, was organized and that the start was expected late today. Prizes of $2000 are offered.

Thomas G. Reid of Downey, Cal., took the air at 11 o'clock yesterday in an attempt to break the record for solo, non-refueled endurance flights of 35 hours, 23 minutes held by Lieut. Herbert Fahy, he must remain aloft until almost midnight tonight to establish a new record.

Mrs. Mae Haislip of Tulsa, Okla., cross-country derbyist, announced she would attempt to establish a new endurance mark for women today or tomorrow, and Ralph Thomas, Cleveland, takes off tomorrow seeking a new solo endurance record for men.

74 MISSING IN SHIPWRECK

search of the wreckage-strewn collision area at daybreak, but that up to 6 a. m. it had not reported picking up any additional persons.

These advices, coming eight hours after the San Juan sank, led to belief that few, if any, of the 74 missing would be found alive, although the command refused to give up the search.

The San Juan went down in five minutes after colliding with the Dodd off Pigeon Point, Cal. Although one side of the Dodd was stove in, she covered her boats and went to the rescue of the passengers and crew who were pitched into the sea as the San Juan sank.

Another ship, the Munami, turned from her course nearby and aided in the rescue work. Several hours later she was on her way to San Francisco with its load of survivors.

SEVERAL INJURED

Every available ambulance in San Francisco was sent to the waterfront to receive the 27 persons picked up by the Dodd. Emergency hospitals were made ready to receive the survivors, some of whom were injured and reported badly in need of medical attention.

The San Juan, a double-decker of iron construction, 235 feet long and of 3500 gross tons, had sailed the seas for 47 years. She was one of the oldest ships on the Pacific.

After a short period of service with the Pacific Mail Steamship line in the South American trade, the San Juan was sold to the James K. Nelson Co. and soon thereafter became the property of the Los Angeles & San Francisco Navigation Co. She plied between the two California cities for years, featuring low passenger fares, and left San Francisco for Los Angeles last night.

CAPTAIN GOES WITH SHIP

Survivors aboard the Dodd said they saw Capt. Adolph F. Asplund go down with his ship.

Ralph Hillman, second radio operator of the San Juan, who was picked up by the Dodd, reported that the collision occurred while he was asleep. He sprang from his berth and ran to the main deck. The deck was awash beneath the surface, and he was hurled into the sea.

Hillman said no lifeboats had been launched from the San Juan.

Two coast guard cutters, the Shawnee and Tahoe, went to the scene of the wreck from San Francisco, while preparations got under way there to receive the injured from the oil tanker. Ambulances were sent to the pier at which the Dodd was expected to dock.

Partial List of Those on Ill-Fated Steamer

San Francisco, Aug. 30 (INS)—Following is a partial list of passengers that were aboard the ill-fated San Juan which sank after a collision with the Standard Oil tanker, S. C. T. Dodd, off the coast of Half Moon Bay:

Mr. and Mrs. Ely; Mrs. Bessphine Foley; Mrs. Riddey; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Granddeten and wife, Mountain View.

Both Bring 6 Cents Wholesale at Fish Pier; 20 Vessels in

More than 50,000 pounds of small mackerel arrived at the Fish pier today when six vessels of the fleet came in with their catches.

The blinks, as they are classed, were sold off the vessels for 5 to 6 cents per pound.

In addition to the members of the mackerel fleet, four steam trawlers, six schooners and four draggers brought cargoes for the end-of-the-week trade.

The steam trawler Foam brought the largest catch among the steamers, with 135,000 haddock, 4000 large cod and 7000 mixed fish aboard.

The high liner in the schooner trade was the Louis M. Winslow, with 80,000 haddock, 7000 large cod; 4000 market cod and 9100 mixed fish from Georges Bank.

IN "PAPER" STORM

The sky scraper belt of lower Manhattan gave its usual boisterous greetings with salvos of cheers and "hocks" and clouds of confetti and ticker tape that belched from roof and lofty window in a pattering storm.

Behind the din and the flying cloudlets of paper there was a deep feeling of awe over the air commander's achievement in making so nonchalantly the world-girdling tour that made neighbors of three continents.

It was Dr. Eckener's second experience of New York's "paper" snow storm, he having been given an official reception last year after the first ocean crossing of the Graf.

At the Battery Dr. Eckener and Lady Grace Drummond Hay, the only woman on the round-the-world flight, spoke briefly into a microphone of the National Broadcasting Co., which was broadcasting the reception.

Then began the triumphal procession uptown to City Hall, where Mayor James J. Walker, in the name of the city, extended heartiest congratulations.

RECEIVES SCROLL

Dr. Eckener was presented a scrool in which Mayor James J. Walker referred to the air navigator as "the ambassador of sublime courage to the entire world."

"We of New York," the scroll read, "who have greeted so many of the brave, delight to honor you for a deed that, rising high above the very spirit of adventure, opens our eyes to the transportation possibilities in the future of the world."

Returning by plane from Washington where he had been greeted by President Hoover, Dr. Eckener and the crew of the air liner left Lakehurst naval air station at 10:30 o'clock this morning for New York city. They came by train to Jersey City and crossed the North river on the ferryboat, escorted by a reception committee headed by Police Commissioner Whalen, the mayor's official guest.

On one side of Dr. Eckener stood Lady Hay. On the other side were Commissioner Whalen and J. Henry Mears, famous aviator who held the record for the speediest round-the-world journey by air before Dr. Eckener took it away from him.

MEARS FOR RECORD

Mears introduced himself to Dr. Eckener saying:

"Commodore, I am the man from whom you took the record."

The grizzled old veteran of the clouds shook hands and smiled and he answered:

"I am sorry."

"Oh, that's all right," was Mears' cordial rejoinder. "Now I must go out and bring it back to America."

Mears intimated he would try to make a round-the-world flight in about 15 or 16 days next year and Dr. Eckener seemed much interested in this revelation.

Mears and C. B. D. Collyer, who has since been killed in an airplane accident, circled the globe in something over 20 days last year, using planes over land and steamers across the Atlantic and Pacific.

There was a line of firetboats in the upper harbor whose sirens shrieked a welcome as the Macom crossed from Jersey. Other harbor craft joined the din and soon there was a chorus of sound ranging from the great booming sirens of the big liners to the toots of the tugboat whistles.

Dr. Eckener stood at the rail, alternately chatting with those around him or gazing at the fascinating picture spread before him in the haze. It was thrilling, he said, to watch the skyscrapers from the water side.

He was touched by the salute from the Los Angeles and the shrieking acclaim from the harbor craft, but was overwhelmed by the remarkable demonstration in his honor as he and his men proceeded from the Battery to City Hall.

United States and German flags flew over City Hall.

In his speech Mayor Walker said, in part:

"No one has ever come into this City Hall or into the hearts of New York who has won a closer or surer place than you. We want you to know how happy you have made us by coming. Of course, you took an unusual way of coming here and got more mileage out of your way here than anyone before you.

"As the first to circumnavigate the world by air you have written a golden page in history. We salute you and we honor you as one of the greatest men living throughout the entire civilized world."

During the speech Dr. Eckener kept his eyes upon the ground and seems embarrassed by the laudatory words.

EXALTED BY MAYOR

In addition to presenting the scroll the mayor gave official gold medals of the city of New York to Dr. Eckener; to Capt. Ernest Lehmann, who will pilot the Graf back to Friedrichshafen, and to the other members of the crew and the passengers.

Upon his response, Dr. Eckener said in part:

"The marvelous and sincere reception combined with the friendly words here have touched us all very deeply—more deeply perhaps because we really see a more friendly attitude toward the German people.

"The American people have always shown great enthusiasm over any progress in a scientific way because they see in it a contribution towards human progress. I know that this attitude is that of the American people.

After the City Hall reception the Eckener party was driven up Broadway and across Times sq. to the Hotel Astor for luncheon.

Meanwhile, preparations were being rushed at the Lehmann air station at Lakehurst, N. J., for the Graf's return to its home base at Friedrichshafen, Germany.

The start has now been set for midnight Saturday.

The airship will make the last stage of its journey in charge of Capt. Ernest A. Lehmann, while Commander Eckener remains in the United States for about two weeks to attend to business in New York and visit the Goodyear Zeppelin Company's plant at Akron, O. On the flight from Lakehurst to Friedrichshafen, Capt. Lehmann will have a chance to better the world-circling record of 21 days 7 hours 34 minutes, established in the flight from Lakehurst to Friedrichshafen for Tokyo at 10:34 a. m., Eastern standard time, Wednesday, Aug. 14. If it arrives back at the German airport before 6:03 p. m. Wednesday, September 4, it will beat the Lakehurst record.

Eckener's Name Is Not in German 'Who's Who'

Dr. O. C. Kelp, German charge d'affaires, made that discovery today in trying to check a date of his famous countryman's record.

Through the great volume, however, he chumbed in vain.

"I am not surprised," he commented. "It is certainly characteristic of Dr. Eckener's great modesty not to have his name in 'Who's Who.'"

Friedrichshafen Plans Greatest Zepp Welcome

Friedrichshafen, Aug. 30 (AP)—This little town has been transformed again from a sleepy South German community to a bustling hive of activity with announcement of the Graf Zeppelin's impending departure for her home port.

The biggest welcome ever given the airship and its crew is being planned. There is general regret Dr. Hugo Eckener, the ship's master, will not make the trip back.

ENGLAND HOLDS SUPERIORITY TILL 1936

Two Powers Agree America Shall Have Best 8-Inch Gun Type Ships

By GEORGE R. HOLMES, International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 30 — Great Britian and the United States have substantially agreed upon the broad principles of a naval accord.

There will have to be, however, some more exchanges between Washington and London before the agreement in principle is ready for public announcement.

Both sides have made concessions from the positions taken at the abortive Geneva conference in 1927, which broke up because of the utter inability of the experts to get together on the controversial cruiser question.

"The statesmen," as exemplified by President Hoover and Premier Ramsay MacDonald, have proven more amenable to compromise than were "the admirals" at Geneva.

1—The united States is to proceed with the construction of the 15 new 10,000-ton cruisers ordered by Congress last year, to be completed in three years. These cruisers will mount 8-inch guns and give the American navy superiority in the 8-inch gun type.

2—Great Britain is to retain superiority in gross cruiser tonnage until time and a replacement program, now being worked out, tend to bring the two navies to approximately parity, which probably will be between 1936 and 1940.

3—Both countries are willing to abolish submarines provided the other powers, Japan, France and Italy, do so.

4—The time for replacement of capital ships (dreadnoughts) under the Washington arms treaties to be extended, thus saving all concerned considerable money.

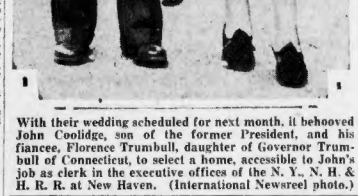
Completion of the 15-cruiser program will give the United States approximately 300,000 tons of first class cruisers, embracing 23 ships of the 10,000-ton class, mounting 8-inch guns, and 10 ships of the 7500-ton class with 6-inch batteries.

Great Britain has approximately 407,000 gross tons of cruisers, of which 15 are of the 10,000-ton class, with 8-inch batteries. The cruiser units of the British, however, number 64, as against the 33 the United States will have.

It thus becomes obvious the United States made very material concessions to Britain.

John Coolidge and Flo Pick Their 'Love Nest'; Now for the Wedding

And here is what John and Flo picked—a four-room suite on the first floor to the right of the entrance to this charming modern apartment house in Westville, a suburb of New Haven. The rent is $78 a month, and the indications are that John's young heiress bride will do the most of the housework herself. (Associated Press photo.)



With their wedding scheduled for next month, it behooved John Coolidge, son of the former President, and his fiancee, Florence Trumbull, daughter of Governor Trumbull of Connecticut, to select a home, accessible to John's job as clerk in the executive offices of the N. SHOTS FIRED IN CLAM BATTLE a hole being stove in the side near the engine room.

The chase continued, according to Ellis, and the diggers tried to ground the patrol boat, but without success. In the meantime a radio call for help was sent to the Dorchester floating coast guard station and another patrol boat responded.

The Point Allerton patrol eventually succeeded in overhauling the large craft and boarded it. Then ensued a vicious battle, Ellis said, with clam knives, oars and clubs, but apparently no one was injured.

In the midst of the melee two of the clam diggers leaped overboard and swam to Thompson's Island, and two others followed in a dory.

The Dorchester patrol fired several shots, but without overhauling the fugitives. The Point Allerton patrol had fired two shots.

The smaller boat, containing nine diggers, was captured by the Dorchester patrol, and both were taken to the Dorchester floating station.

The prisoners were herded into the station except the captain and engineer of the big boat. Watching their opportunity, they cut loose and put to sea. Several shots were fired at them but they escaped.

The 16 pleaded not guilty to digging clams in a contaminated area, and their cases were continued to Sept. 11.

They are: Charles Dirose, Broadway, Revere; Russell T. Putnam, Alice st., Revere; Daniel Welch, Everett st., East Boston; Ernest Feeley, Sumner st., East Boston; Charles L. Voltz, Ipswich st., East Boston; Felix G. Young, Arcadia st., Revere; Joseph Young, Beverly st., Revere; John Zizzo, Roosevelt st., Revere; Joseph Russo, Sumner st., East Boston; James Dunn, Webster st., East Boston; Arthur Payne, Putnam st., Winthrop; Thomas A. Curley Gives $200 For Jew Relief; Raps 'Slayers'

Former Mayor James M. Curley today sent a check for $200 to the Palestine Relief Fund.

"The tragedy at Jerusalem is a shock to humanity the world over and the best answer to the murderers and to those agencies whose callous neglect was thus the crime is a united protest.

"A united America, protesting with voice, pen and cash, will compel protection now and in the future."

Find Old Postoffice Strong as Fortress

No fortress of medieval times was more solidly constructed than the postoffice building, in the opinion of P. A. Newman, contractor, under whose direction the work of demolition is being carried on.

"In all my experience," he said, in paying tribute to the original designers and builders, "I can recall but few buildings put together more firmly and possessing greater lasting qualities than this colossal mass of granite. However, our work is proceeding according to schedule and is expected to be completed by the first of the year."

The razing of the outer walls, composed of 10 and 12-ton granite blocks, is one of the greatest difficulties connected with the undertaking, according to the wreckers, and will call for the use of giant cranes.

FIGHT LOOMS ON FARM BOARD

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP)—Intent on driving the tariff bill through the Senate before the regular session in December, administration leaders are planning to hold up any except emergency business.

It is possible, for this reason, that President Hoover may withhold all but the most necessary nominations until the December session.

However, the names of the new farm board will be transmitted to the Senate next week, when it meets for business. While confirmation of the board is anticipated there are indications of some trouble. Senator Brookhart, Republican, Iowa, has served notice he wants the members summoned before a Senate committee for questioning on plans for helping wheat growers.

Mr. Hoover also has a number of diplomatic appointments to make and several judicial nominations, but in view of the attitude of Republican leaders it seems likely he may withhold some of these.

Jack London Novels Under Fascist Fire

Rome, Aug. 30 (INS)—Novels by the late Jack London, of California, are under fire in Italy.

The authorities have instructed the prefects of Italy's 92 provinces to check the excessive sale and diffusion of the works of such Russian authors as Gorki, Dostoievski, Tolstoy and also the novels of Jack London. London's "Iron Heel" is especially mentioned.

The instructions specify that there is no desire to interfere with the legitimate sale of these books at normal prices. They do state, however, that the distribution of the books is to be checked when they are to be used to oppose Fascism.

Hub Man Going Back to Germany on Zepp

New York, Aug. 30—When the Graf Zeppelin leaves for Germany tomorrow midnight it will carry three new passengers, seven who will have completed a flight around the world when they reach Friedrichshafen, and two who have already been around the world in the ship and made an extra Atlantic flight to boot.

Joachim Richard of Boston and Madrid, and Heins von Eschwegelichbert, German news representative, came from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst in the Graf, made the world flight, and now will return to Germany in it.

The new passengers are John W. Schnitzler of Froid, Mont., president of the First National Bank of Froid, member of the Republican national committee, and owner of an airplane himself; R. A. L. Bogan of Syracuse, N. Y., general manager of a bread company, and Edward P. Frost of New York.

The seven who boarded the ship at Friedrichshafen and who will complete their circling of the globe when the Graf gets back there are H. von Perkheimer, German photographer; H. Geisenheimer and Gustav Kauder, German news men; Leo Gerville-Reache, French news man; Dr. S. C. Seikopf of the Hamburg weather bureau; Lieut.-Col. Christoph Iselin of the Swiss Army, and Dr. J. Megias, physician to the king of Spain.

NAB PROWLER AT PALACE

London, Aug. 30 (AP)—Special police were sent from Scotland Yard today to investigate the capture just before dawn of a man who had forced an entrance into the Buckingham Palace grounds. The man refused to divulge his name, or say why he was trying to get into the royal residence.

It was necessary for the policeman who saw him inside the palace grounds, near the diplomats' entrance, to scale the walls himself, since all the gates were locked. The man tried to hide in the shadows of the walls. He was taken to police headquarters and searched. He appeared to be one of England's army of unemployed, poorly dressed and unarmed.

None of the royal family was at the palace. King George and Queen Mary went to Sandringham last week.

REVERE PLANS PROTEST ON AUTO RATES

Owners to Voice Objections to New Schedule at Meeting Next Thursday

A mass meeting of Revere motorists, to protest against the proposed increases in compulsory insurance rates has been called for next Tuesday in Revere City Hall by Mayor Andrew A. Casassa.

Instructions to call this mass meeting came to Mayor Casassa's secretary, Mrs. Vivian Lockhart, today, from St. Paul, Minn., where His Honor is attending a convention.

The plan that Revere motorists will follow to combat the new schedule of rates will be determined at this meeting. Representatives will be chosen to attend the public hearing at the State House September 9.

That hearing will be conducted by Insurance Commissioner M. L. Brown.

Under the proposed new rates Revere would pay the second highest compulsory insurance in the state, being topped only by Chelsea.

Plans to carry the fight to the Supreme Court already are under way by leading residents of both Revere and Chelsea.

Court action will take the form of an attempt to obtain an injunction to prevent Commissioner Brown from carrying out his proposed schedule, on the ground that it violates the constitutional rights of the motorists of Revere and Chelsea.

The law under which the insurance commissioner acts in fixing rates each year states that the rates shall be just and non-discriminatory. Citizens of Revere and Chelsea claim the proposed new rates will be unjust and discriminatory.

Hundreds of car owners, from Chelsea and Revere, will attend the hearing in Gardner Auditorium Sept. 9.

He said:

"I believe that the rates as now contemplated by the Insurance Commissioner are the thought and the energy of the insurance companies of Massachusetts. The rates are very unfair and discriminatory and it will be interesting to get the facts on how they were established.

"It is my belief that ex-governor Fuller was right when he said that the 'big boys' are running the insurance department.

"I strongly and vigorously opposes the increase and who will take the fight into the Supreme Court with Senator Brodbine, is Rep. Thomas F. Carroll of Revere. He said:

"The increase is a flagrant injustice to the motorists of Revere. The state took over Revere Beach and improved it so that it would be a playground for the entire population of the Metropolitan area. The result is that thousands of motorists ride through Revere to get to the beach. Thus an extra hazard for the motorists of Revere is created.

"Sixty per cent of the accidents in Revere in which Revere motorists figure are the direct result of that extra hazard."

Rep. John W. McLeod of Chelsea said:

"I propose to do everything in my power to protect the people of Chelsea from the unjust and discriminatory rates which the Commissioner of Insurance intends to put into effect.

TEXTILE MILL DYNAMITED

Deputy sheriffs on guard at the mill, where a strike is in progress, failed to catch the dynamiters.

Today's dynamiting was the first to cause damage in a series of explosions and attempted dynamitings in connection with the walkout. No one was hurt. The opening room is the one in which bales of raw cotton are opened.

Three strikers are under arrest charged with attempting to dynamite the home of the Rev. J. N. Wise, a Methodist Episcopal church south minister. They are Bruce Stacy, Robert Perkins and George Styles.

Charlotte, N. C., Aug. 30 (INS)—A rural policeman and a textile mill worker were killed in a gun battle at Haw Creek, six miles from here, today.

Parade and Mass Meeting to Be Held in Denunciation of Riots

Stirred to the utmost by news from abroad, the Jewish youth of Boston were today preparing for the greatest demonstration in protest against Arabian atrocities in Palestine ever staged by young men and women of the faith in this city.

An open air meting Saturday night, followed by a parade and mass meeting on Sunday, were but three of the demonstrations the Jewish juniors planned as they met in Zionist headquarters today.

Keyed to feverish enthusiasm and swayed by the great outburst of their elders at the big Faneuil Hall protest gathering the boys and girls were hopeful that their efforts would eclipse the showing which Boston Jewry made last Wednesday night.

Leaders of the local Jewish Youth Movement were being solicited as speakers for tomorrow's meeting. Adult Zionists also were being prevailed upon to address the junior ranks.

Permit ha salready been granted for the outdoor meeting to take place at the corner of Woodrow and Blue Hill aves. at 8 p. m. tomorrow. Hyman Manovitch, whose indignation over the Arab attack has led him to seek Jewish war veterans here for service in Palestine, will preside.

PLAN BIG PARADE

Aaron Shain, Harvard; Hyman Ezrog, Tufts; Israel Kaza, Harvard, Sidney Epstein, general supervisor of Joung Judea; Dr. Anna Minta, Hadassah and Young Judea worker, and Phoebe Woolf, vice-president of the Boston Section, Council of Jewish Juniors, form a tentative list of speakers.

Every young Jewish organization in the city is co-operating and will send representation to both meetings as well as participate in the parade Sunday. Of especial interest will be the showing made by Jewish youngsters of twelve. There will have conspicuous part in the parade.

Recruited from every Hebrew school in the city, the boys and girls will carry placards voicing sentiments of protest and flags of Zion, the Magen David" (Shield of David) on the background of blue and white, Hebrew colors.

The veterans will parade in uniforms. The parade route will take them from the Home of the Jewish War Veterans in Charles st., Dorchester, through Blue Hill ave. to the Wellington Hill auditorium.

The marchers will gather at 11 a. m. and the parade is scheduled to start at noon. The mass meeting will open at 2 p. m.

CITY'S TAX RATE CUT TO $28

NEW TAX FEATURE

This latter item is a new feature in the tax rate, arising from provisions of Sec. 9, Chap. 379 of the Acts of 1928 the assessors were limited this year to making the deduction to "an amount not in excess of the proceeds received the preceding year from motor vehicle personal property tax on motor vehicles"

The total valuation for 1929 is given as $1,863,231,000, representing a net gain of $9,455,600 over the valuation of 1928.

Real property shows a total assessed valuation of $1,606,316,200, a gain of $26,561,800 over last year. This gain, it was stated, has been offset by a loss of $17,206,300 on personal property.

Personal property assessments for this year total $146,914,800. The loss of personal property valuations, the report stated, is occasioned by the motor excise tax law passed by last year's legislature.

INCREASES EXPLAINED

The increase in city maintenance is attributed in the main to the following causes:

Better protection of life and property through increased personnel in the fire and police departments; additional personnel in the City and Long Island Hospitals to properly man and administer new buildings at these institutions; improved street lighting; heavy winter storms necessitating larger appropriations for snow removal; increased payments for citizens in State sanatoria and private hospitals; improved assessing methods; increased population in hospitals and institutions resulting in increases in appropriations for food, medicinal supplies and wearing apparel; increased disbursements by public welfare departments, and first year maintenance expense of Boston Traffic Commission and East Boston Airport.

The increase in county maintenance is attributed in the main to the increased number of inmates to be found in the correctional institutions of the county.

The city debt requirements increase is attributed to the high interest rates and a general shortening in the terms of periods for which municipal loans are being issued.

More Safety Zone Lines

At the request of Rep. Charles A. Sullivan, Jr., white pedestrian safety zone lines will be painted on Chelsea st., near City sq., Charlestown, it was announced today.

BORDER WAR ON RUM CUTS DOWN SMUGGLING

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP)—The Treasury's campaign against rum-running from Canada in the Detroit area is shown in Customs Bureau figures made public today to decrease the Canadian liquor exports from towns across the border by more than 50 per cent.

The liquor imports from Canadian towns opposite Detroit for June and July totaled 171,719 cases as compared with 439,101 in the same months of last year, or a drop from 1,096,732 to 429,296 gallons.

The decrease was noticeable as soon as the border patrol began to gather at Detroit. In April of this year the exportation total was 71,430 cases, while the May figures showed that 6096 gallons less on liquor was cleared for this country.

The clearance figures, which were furnished by the Canadian Government, also showed that the total Canadian clearances since 1st March amounted to 793,761 gallons. The figures include whiskey, wine, beer, brandies, and all alcoholic beverages which come under the ban on the prohibition law.

SMITH HEADS BIG BUILDING PROJECT

New York, Aug. 30—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith, who in his own words, "has been out of a job for eight months," has accepted a position.

The job which the four-time Governor of New York and Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1928, has taken, is an executive one. He now heads the Empire State Building Corporation which has been organized to erect on the site of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, the largest and highest office building in the world. "I'm to be an Irish landlord," said Mr. Smith.

The building which will be known as the Empire State building is to be 80 stories in height and its total estimated cost is upward of $60,000,000. It will occupy two acres of land and have a frontage of 200 feet on Fifth ave. and 425 feet on Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth sts. The building will be used entirely for offices and Mr. Smith and his associates hope to have it ready in a year and a half.

It can house more than 60,000 persons.

"Does this mean you are leaving politics?" the former governor was asked.

"No indeed," he exclaimed, "I'm not retiring from politics either city, state or national. But I haven't any political plans at the moment."

Crowd Jails With 150 Naked Doukhobors

Nelson, B. C., Aug. 30 (AP)—Provincial and city jails here were packed to overflowing today with 150 Doukhobors, members of a Russian religious sect, who started a nude parade on the highway 15 miles south of the city and were rounded up by police.

A march on Nelson was begun several days ago in protest against the imprisonment of Peter Wolseff, a Doukhobor, in connection with the burning of Doukhobor schools.

When police arrived to arrest four members who had disrobed, more than 100 of the marchers, men, women and children, took off their clothes. They were given half an hour to dress. Refusing, they were loaded into trucks, automobiles and buses, and brought here.

A special truck carrying discarded clothing dumped the garments in the prison yard, but the protestants still declined to resume the habiliments of civilization.

The system is to run from Houston st. to the Harlem river, north of 125th st., with feeder lines and connecting links to provide service to Brooklyn, Queens and part of the Bronx.

Facilities to link the line with the Interborough or Brooklyn-Manhattan transit lines in event of merger or consolidation are provided.

Slayer Dies in Sing Sing Chair

New York, Aug. 30 (INS)—Life meant little to John Farri, Syracuse murderer. He spurned the offer made to every condemned man to have whatever he chose for his last two meals.

He ate heartily of the regular Sing Sing prison fare before starting his walk to the electric chair. He killed Louis Mangino in a drunken brawl last year.

PLAN TO SAVE CREW OF SUBS

Spezia, Italy, Aug. 30—A new way of saving crews of sunken submarines has been perfected by the Italian navy, and the submarines F-17 and Toti, at a depth of 10 feet, passed two men out of one into the other.

Italian engineers say that when a submarine sinks, another submarine can approach it under water and take off the stranded crew. The experiment was made by Comdr. Belloni and Da Felo.

The men entered the conning tower of the Toti and groped their way to the F-17. They entered by means of a torpedo-tube, to which was attached a large steel bowl in which the air, at a pressure of two atmospheres, kept the water out.

Comdr. Belloni was of the opinion that the crew of a sunken submarine, at a reasonable depth, may now be transferred to another submarine and carried to safety.

Horse Likes Melons, So Battle Begins

Dimitri Stanopolous of Cambridge has a fruit cart and his brother resident, Bernard Sternburg, has a horse and wagon.

All day long they merrily ply their happy way through the treelined streets and sun-kissed lanes of the city, Dimitri soliciting his luscious golden melons and Bernard offering to the housewives his gleaming, cool, most comfortable cakes of silver-colored ice.

And then there was Bernard, another vender, who was quite responsible for beaming and joyful countenances in the neighborhood. How he would make the children shout for glee when he drew up to the curb with his wagon loaded to the top with cool, refreshing ice, just taken from the icehouse for the comfort and coolness of a citizenry beset by sultry summer weather.

Dimitri, the fruit pedlar and Bernard, the ice man, were merry music in the symphony of American happiness.

Fate struck a terrible blow to all that was wonderful and peaceful when Bernard's horse came upon Dimitri's melons. Bernard was probably lugging a huge cake up to a third story and Dimitri with his basket of fruit was delivering a melon in another residence.

Soon Dimitri came out and found the horse eating the melons. Bernard appeared and did not have to have his horse tell him of the zeal for Dimitri was right there with the story. Words flew like machine gun bullets. There was fast disappearing that cheery atmosphere which both venders generally brought into the neighborhood.

3 WOMEN HURT IN CRASH

North Attleboro, Aug. 30—Three women are in the John Paul Cooper Hospital here, suffering from injuries received in a head-on crash of automobiles on South Washington st., the Boston and Providence highway.

Mrs. Sarah McKay of Hartford, Conn., the most seriously hurt, is believed to have received spinal injuries which partly paralyzed her. Mrs. Florence Wright of Pawtucket, and Mrs. Minnie Stone of Brooklyn, were severely cut and bruised about the head and body.

Woman Is Sued Over "Act of God"

Worcester, Aug. 30—What is said to be one of the few, if not the first case of its kind ever brought in this country, was filed in Superior Court, here by Attorney Stephen H. Benoit, as counsel for the estate of Amos LaBranche of this city. Blanche (LaJoie) St. Martin, also of this city, named respondent.

Attorney Stephen has taken what is legally termed "unintervening act of God," death, as the basis of an equity case.

The petitioner has asked the court to order a diamond ring claimed to have been given by Amos LeBranche to Mrs. St. Martin returned on the ground that an intervening act of God made it impossible for LeBranche to carry out the contract to marry. The bill recites that Daniel LaBranche was named administrator of the estate of Amos LeBranche who, prior to his death gave to Blanche St. Martin a ring that was to be an engagement ring.

The bill further states that Amos LeBranche met with an accident and died and therefore was not able to fulfill the contract of marriage to the then Miss LaJoie.

CONSUL DEANE ENDS LIFE

Washington, Aug. 30—The State Department announced it had been informed that Harold M. Deane of Providence, American Consul at Montreal, had committed suicide by hanging himself. The communication said no reason for the consul's act was known.

Deane graduated from Yale in 1913 and taught for four years at Robert College in Constantinople. He served as clerk in the Legation at Berne and was with the American Peace Commission in Paris. He entered the foreign service in 1919 and was assigned to various posts in South America.

While in Valparaiso, his child became ill with infantile paralysis and his transfer to Montreal was arranged so that the child could have the best medical attention and a good climate. The department's statement said the child was steadily improving.

CUSTOMS MAN SUSPICIOUS WHEN HE SEES FACE LOTION

with fresh laurels to the scene of her first world-shaking triumph last October, after the pioneer east-to-west transatlantic flight from continent to continent.

Hospitable America is a real "homeland" to everyone who has tasted of her loving cup of cheer and welcome. I suppose it is quite natural, considering that America has played the "mother" to millions of foreign born adopted children for generations and generations. Practically every one of the representatives of nine different European nations aboard has family connections in the United States. The Japanese, no doubt, found theirs in Los Angeles and San Francisco where they left the Zeppelin and from where they will go back to Japan.

"THE GOLDEN WEST"

America is certainly going to be a very special kind of home for me this time. Not only does it spell the happiness of being amongst my American friends again—and I count as friends not only those I know personally but all the kind people who smiled and waved at out silver airship as she passed over country and cities, but also the joy of reunion with my mother and father who have rushed from London on the Mauretania to greet me on my return from the round-the-world flight.

I have been trying to tell you all that happened all the way along, and meant to write such a lot about Los Angeles, but there was no time to do anything, it seemed once we came to earth.

I was asked at once what most impressed me during the whole three weeks lapse of the world flight and I had no hesitation in answering, "San Francisco at sunset and Los Angeles by night."

I was tremendously struck by the wonderful way in which the field had been kept clear for us at Los Angeles and know enough now about landing exigencies to appreciate what it meant; the efficiency, forethought and days of hard work that the whole affair must have cost the organizers and executives. I did think it funny, though, that the customs officer demanded to examine so minutely the baggage which was only being taken to the hotel for a few hours.

He even made me open my old portable typewriter and peered inside. And he asked where I bought my film camera with the name of the well known American maker stuck right on it. He had to poke over my valise containing afternoon and evening dress to wear in Los Angeles and had such grave suspicion of my astringent lotion for the face that he opened the bottle and sniffed hard.

Everything that happened on that sunny California day was just splendid.

SUNSHINE AND SMILES

I saw so many smiles in Los Angeles, so much sunshine and received so many flowers that all I could think of to say over the microphones thrust up at me on the field and elsewhere was some remark about "California being the land of smiles, sunshine and flowers."

Once on the airship field of Los Angeles we still had quite a job to "catch" it, as you will have heard. But what few people probably know is that Karl Von Wiegand and myself came near being left behind. In all the running about and scrambling we got separated from the rest of the passengers, mostly because I had gone across the field to speak through a microphone, I imagine.

At last the Zep was standing still ready to be released and we were still far away. Starting to run for it, a young soldier barred the way with his flagpole or whatever it was that he had in his hand. We could not think that he meant to stop us and so moved forward, and were held back.

Even then we, and the gentleman of the reception committee with us, did not take the young soldier seriously. But he took himself ridiculously seriously and would not let us pass. "I have heard enough about passengers," he said. "Everyone says they are passengers," and saying that when he received orders to allow the "crowd" to advance—which, of course, would have been when the Zep was in the air—he would let us go. He just stuck firm.

Karl von Wiegand said, "I will show you my passport—you can see who I am. "I had my passport along too in my bag and offered to show mine. Karl said, "I will show my ticket for the Zeppelin journey." The reception committee gentleman produced his letter of identification.

Would this boy let us through? No. He would not look at our passports, he would not listen to us, he would not listen to the people in the crowd, who very kindly cried out, "We know it is Lady Drummond Hay—let her through."

No, nothing doing at all and really we began to get anxious, for Eckener might easily imagine that everyone was on board and start off.

"All passengers are on board by now," maintained this redoubtable youth, and there was nothing to do—

Short of laying him out, but to rush the line of soldiers, which we did, thanks to many gentlemen in the crowd. There was little or no opposition from the other guard—they knew who were were, but evidently this boy has some authority or something. I asked him chaffingly for his name, but he would not divulge it.

PLENTY OF MAIL

Once aboard, our takeoff—in which we nearly took off a bunch of high tension wires, has been told we would not be here if that had happened. T. Z. Zepp we k have burnt into flames in a second, and the only blessing that it would all have been so sudden that we should not have known a thing about it.

At Los Angeles three passengers had descended, and most of those who continued the trip slept late the morning after we left Los Angeles. When they did get up they were quiet and tired. In the evening most of them slipped away to bed as early as they could. No water to wash with at night, any more than there was in the morning.

Everyone was supremely happy with stacks of mail to open and peruse. Very few of us have ever before had such a big personal post bag. They include everything from little gifts tucked away between sheets of notepaper, pressed flowers, handkerchiefs, photographs, to prayers written for our recitation in special circumstances, hymns dedicated to our use, praise, requests for everything from autographs to free rides in the Zep, letters from unknown relations, manuscripts from aspiring but unrecognised authors soliciting help, to countless begging letters, some in English, others in German and foreign languages.

The funniest thing happened Wednesday as we were passing over Kansas City, whistles blowing, crowds waving, airplanes escorting us—a reception to bring tears to our eyes. We were all at the windows, but kept them shut, only Perckhammer, the photographer, leaned right out to show himself to a plane passing near—Perckhammer, with his swollen cheek heavily tied up in one of the waxing towels (for which we find no use now there is no water), looking for all the world as if he had been terribly mauled in some fight.

"Pull him in," cried Eckener from the luncheon table. "They will think we have fights on board the Zep."

PLAN PRIVATE AIRPORT AT LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Aug. 30—Close on the heels of the announcement of the purchase of the Everett mills property in this city by a New York syndicate as a new location for 20 individual electrical and radio concerns, came the information that the same syndicate had also purchased Cromont, the clubhouse and spacious grounds of the Cromont Club in Methuen.

The clubhouse, it was stated by one of the syndicate officials, would be at the service of executives of the 20 concerns, while on a portion of 300 acres of land would be established a private airport, from which airplanes will fly daily to and from New York for the convenience of the same executives.

Work on laying out the airport will be started at once and it will be ready for service within a few months. The private airline, it is expected, will when possible afford passenger service to Lawrence citizens.

The syndicate control a large part of the production of radio and electrical appliances and will put all its plants under one roof in the old Everett mills property. At present the plants employ 5000.

Negotiations for the purchase of the old mill property have been in progress since last March and the Lawrence Industrial Bureau, assisted by Mayor Landers, has played a prominent part in bringing the new industries to this city.

The property has 24 acres of floor space, all of which will not be necessary for the 20 concerns, and the local industrial bureau is now making efforts to find other manufacturing tenants for the surplus space. The sale will complete the liquidation of the Everett mills, for many years one of the city's most prosperous industries.

Marlboro to Open Drive Against Dogs

Marlboro, Aug. 30—An open season on uncollared and unlicensed dogs will open here today when police will seize and kill all dogs without collars which bears the animal's license number and the name and address of its owner.

In the past three months there have been two cows, six pigs and more than 100 hens killed by dogs.

TRIED IN DEATH OF INSANE PATIENT

Worcester, Aug. 30—John E. McClellan, 50 ex-attendant at the Gardner colony for the insane, is on trial in Superior Court on an indictment charging manslaughter in connection with the death of John Aschukin, a patient at the colony. The state claims McClellan assulted and beat the patient in such a manner that he died.

Dist. Atty. Charles Rugg told the jury in his opening address that it would be shown there had been friction between McClellan and Aschukin and that on the day of the alleged assault they had quarreled at breakfast.

Later in the day Aschukin was placed at work in a group of men under the direction of McClellan, and when he complained of not feeling well was transferred to the hospital, where his injuries were discovered by doctors.

The government will show, Mr. Rugg stated, that McClellan had made threats he would fix the patient, who had previously wandered from the colony, so that he would not again wander away.

URGE PAYMENT TO GUGGENHEIM

Washington, Aug. 30—Joseph S. Ames, chairman of the executive committee of the national advisory committee for aeronautics, urged Controller Gen. McCarl to reconsider his denial of the $584 expense account of Harry F. Guggenheim on a recent flight from New York to Washington in connection with the work of the committee.

McCarl ruled that Guggenheim was not entitled to submit a voucher for more than $36.38, the railroad fare from and to New York.

Official aeronautical circles continue to buzz indignantly over what is termed the near-sighted ruling of the controller general. They realize that McCarl is seeking to adhere rigidly to the letter of the law, but feel that the policy should be liberalized and men like Guggenheim who are devoting so much of their time and money to the unselfish side of aeronautical development be given the benefit of the doubt on all such occasions.

Lucky Buck to Trail City Employes

By WON LUCKY BILL

Tomorrow is the day of all days for city employes. If these folks are on their toes and use their eyes they are going to make some easy money.

My tactics in getting these old $1 lucky bills in their possession is a little different from the policy I followed for the city firemen and letter carriers. I put a flock of lucky bucks into circulation yesterday and will continue again today. These bills will be spent in places where I know they will reach city employes.

After I have passed out a few score of them, I will select from this lot 16 old $1 bills at random and publish the serial numbers in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

I wish to acknowledge a letter from M. W. of Stoughton, who complains that no one in Stoughton ever wins anything in my great money game. Now I want to say that it's "just too bad for you folks of Stoughton, but it's your own fault." I visit Stoughton at least once a week and I never do leave without spending at least five lucky bucks about the town. Last Sunday I put out a $20 winner at a soda fountain. I put a $20 winner in a drug store. I put a $10 winner in a lunch room right in the heart of the city and watched the counter man check his old $1 bills with the list in the Boston Evening American, but he failed to give the bill I handed him a glance. I know of at least ten $5 winners I have put out in previous weeks in Stoughton as well as one of those $100 winners and several other $20 winners.

By the way, what in the world is the matter with the folks down in Maine? Don't you want any of this easy money I'm passing out for lucky bucks. I've put nearly 50 lucky bucks out in Maine since I started my game. There were two $100 winners which were crossed off the list because they were not redeemed within one week.

Five persons cashed in yesterday on lucky bucks. They are:

Mrs. Florence Jackson, 622 Hancock st., Wollaston, sent in lucky buck A852492945, a winner for $5.

Mrs. B. Carroll, 194 Pleasant st., Pawtucket, R. I., sent in lucky buck A301776562 and will receive a check for $5.

Released on bonds reported put up by J. M. Barrque, secretary of justice, Barlow was resting after a 24-hour incarceration at Principe Fortress, which he described as "an awful nightmare, in which I was placed in a cell with crazy men."

Have you ever thought how much more you could accomplish—how much greater enjoyment you and your family could get out of everyday life—if only you had a second car at your disposal?

If you've had such thoughts, then you'll also want to think a little about how easy it is these days to obtain the added motoring comforts and pleasures which two-car ownership can provide—when you make your second car a good used one. And there isn't any trick to that—not after you've investigated a few of the attractive and serviceable automobiles offered by the dependable dealers in Greater Boston.

It isn't real economy to wear the same clothing for every occasion. Neither is it economical to make all of your transportation demands on one car.

Most families today have at least one car and that is usually used by the "man of the house" in the performance of the daily duties or pleasures. But the wife and family need a car, too; the present-day social system makes two or three cars a stark necessity.

Why not make yours a two or three-car family? GOOD USED CARS for the wife and children can be purchased at reasonable prices from Greater Boston's Automobile Merchants who offer 80% value for 60% of the original price.

BRITAIN ACTIVE IN NEW LEAGUE SESSIONS

Geneva, Aug. 30 (AP)—The 56th session of the council of the League of Nations, the session which always precedes the meeting of the assembly of the league, convened today privately with Prince Ali Foroughi of Persia presiding.

With the British Labor government expected to adhere to the compulsory arbitration clause in the world court, the British member today made what was interpreted generally as a statement indicating the Labor government will play an active part in league activities.

H. Dalton, parliamentary undersecretary of state, announced Great Britain wishes to see a speeding up of ratifications of international treaties and would raise this question in the assembly.

Expressing dissatisfaction with the slowness of ratifications, Mr. Dalton said the signatures of conventions should be a realty and not merely a device for seeking to support propositions at Geneva which are not necessarily followed up when the delegates return home.

Mohammed Ali Khan Foroughi of Persia, who is the president at the present session, announced Persia had adhered to the anti-gas protocol.

The council accepted a grant of $724,000 from the health division of the Rockefeller Foundation for league health work in 1930-31.

Determination of the nationalist government in China to pursue an active role in the league was indicated with deposit of a check in the league treasury for 560,000 Swiss francs ($212,000) as China's subscription for 1929.

Auction Bridge

A PRE-EMPTIVE OVERCALL
The Bidding

Auction: South (Dealer) pass; West, pass; North pass; East, one Heart. South, one Spade; West, pass; North, two Diamonds; East, two Hearts; South, two Spades; West, pass; North, three Clubs; East, three Hearts. South, four Diamonds; West, four Hearts; North, four Spades; East, five Hearts South, five Spades; West, pass; East, double; all pass.

Contract: South, pass; West, pass; North, pass; East, two Hearts. South, three Spades; West, four Hearts; North, four Spades; East, five Hearts. South, five Spades; West, pass; North, pass; East, double; all pass.

Salient Points of Bidding

Auction: South's hand lacks the two quick tricks necessary for an opening bid, a requisite regardless usually of the length of the best suit holo. North's holding, while below the quick trick requirement for a Third Hand bid, would be tempting were it not for the extreme weakness of the two Majors. Therefore, North, although holding a two-suited hand of great potential strength, passes. East's holding is of such great top strength as to make a pre-emptive bid unnecessary. Following East's second rebid of Hearts, West's four Hearts to the Queen and singleton Spade justify his assist, North assists South with but two Spades because of his side strength, South's rebid indicating that an assist could be given with less than normal length in Spades.

Contract: South's bid of three Spades overcalling two Hearts by a bid of a trick more than necessary, cannot be a forcing overcall as South had previously passed and consequently must be read by North as indicating a Spade suit of great length with little or no strength in side suits. So read, North can support the bid because of his side strength, though lacking three cards of the Spade suit. East's rebid to five hearts was justified by his eight Probable Trick hand. South, following his partner's assist of the secondary Spade bid, and holding no defense against loss of game at Hearts, bids five Spades, which East doubles.

The Play

West's opening lead of the Deuce of Hearts shows East four Hearts in West's hand and therefore two in South's. East therefore returns a Heart to force Dummy to trump in order to prevent the lead of Spades twice through his King. Thus East is assured of making his King of Spades.

Declarer, trumping in Dummy, leads Dummy's Jack of Spades and covers with the Queen in hope of dropping the King on an immediate second round should the Queen hold. The King not falling on the Ace, Declarer leads another trump to put East in, hoping that East will lead another Heart. Should he do so, South, trumping the Heart, would then discard his losing Club on a long Diamond finesse win East, however, sets the contract at once by leading the Ace of Clubs.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper enclosing self addressed stamped envelope.

News and Gossip of Boston Society Folk

Leaders Approve New Paris Styles Shown at North Shore Benefit

SOCIETY AGREES WITH Paris that the long skirt is chic this season. Four hundred leaders of fashion, assembled at the beautiful home of Mrs. Robert S. Bradley at Pride's Crossing, not only nodded approval as the new fall styles were displayed by many of society's loveliest debs and recent brides, but openly applauded several models that touched the heels of the wearers. Among these a black net Patou dinner frock, shown by Miss Betty Barrell, startled by its daring descent to the floor. Only the street modes looked familiar as the new fashions passed in review in the luxurious setting of the Bradley mansion and even these are about three inches longer than formerly.

THE FALL BRIDE WILL BE a picture of dignity and simplicity in the new offering of Lelong, displayed by Mrs. Grafton Smith. Her gown was of ivory moire with long, tight sleeves, fitted bodice, high waist and high neck. The skirt was short in front and long bouffant on the sides and back with a long train and tulle veil without ornament of any kind. Another fashion graciously received was the wide velvet hat that lent eclat to the irregular long black velvet frock on the Callot mode shown by Miss Frances Goodwin. Mrs. Robert F. Herrick, Jr., in a long ermine cloak over a Lanvin velvet and lace creation was stunning, and Mrs. Joseph Hoyt in the abbreviated "Whoopee" suit in dahlia tweed with grey lapin, trim effectively, brought out the style revolution this season.

MISS FRANCES MOORE'S perfect blonde type was admirably brought out by the Lanvin blue lace frock which exactly matched her eyes. Mrs. Thomas Proctor, 2nd, with raven tresses and dark eyes, was equally stunning in a plum satin gown with the new waistline and long skirt. Miss Catherine Olney made an excellent mannequin for the spirituelle type, effective in black velvet with lace yoke and in a mauve ensemble trimmed with gray Persian lamb. Miss Leila Stevens was never prettier than in the scarlet velvet dinner gown offered by Boulanger. Mrs. Alexander Shaw was lovely in several models for evening and street, and Miss Phyllis Ellsworth displayed the petite styles for the sub-deb. One of the loveliest of these was the beige French lapin jacket worn with a matching silk pleated skirt. Miss Abby Beveridge modelled a smart brown lace on long lines.

THE SCENE WAS RAVISHING in its beauty and luxury. Not only the arbiters of fashion but also the entire debutante set flocked to this event, eager not only to view the new styles but to aid a favorite charity, the North Shore Babies Hospital. As each original import made its bow to the company that crowded two spacious salons and the reception halls, the first dismayed silence melted into open admiration. Dignity and grace once more reign supreme in the world of fashion, approved by society leaders from all over the country, summering on the North Shore.

Others noted were Mrs. Boylston Children's Hospital of Boston. Mrs. John Perrin is chairman of the committee and Mrs. James M. Hunnewell and a large corps of debs are directors. These include Misses Mary Ives, Anna Walcott, Margaret Emerson, Ethel White, Constance Learned, Peggy Creighton, Katharine Bowden, Charlotte Sherburn, Barbara Hodges, Elizabeth Brewster, Katharine Gray, Rosamond Holton, Priscilla Simonds, Katherine Weeks, Mrs. James C. Gray, Jr., and the Cosby twins, Charlotte and Caroline. Others helping with the sale are Mrs. William Potter, Mrs. Edwin Rudd, Mrs. Francis Breed, Mrs. Elliott Pratt, Mrs. Frederick Lee, Mrs. Francis Tappan and Misses Eleanor and Nancy Jaynes.

MISS EMILY PRESCOTT IS spending this weekend with her grandmother, Mrs. Frank W. Stearns of Red Gables, Little's Point, Swampscott. The Stearns' have bought a house on Commonwealth ave., to which they will go about the first of October. Miss Janet Rothwell, the daughter of the James Rothwells of Marblehead Neck and Bay State rd., was among those who entertained at the Eastern Yacht Club last evening before the dance. She was hostess to a group of the younger set.

Betty Alden

MRS. BRADLEY, THE hostess, wore a beige lace frock of the new mode. Among the important matrons attending were Mrs. Godfrey Lowell Cabot, Mrs. Edward Wigglesworth, Mrs. Neal Rantoul, Mrs. Francis I. Amory, Mrs. Samuel Cabot Jr., Mrs. Russell Burrage and her two daughters, Misses Katherine and Anne, Mrs. George L. Von Meyer, Princess Michael Cantacuzene, Mrs. Curtis Guild, Mrs. John L. LIMITS JAPAN PLANS MORE CRUISERS

Tokyo, Aug. 30 (AP)—Kyo Takaki, Japanese naval minister, in a statement today admitted Japan is considering a new program of auxiliary cruiser construction.

He said newspaper accounts contained erroneous figures. These accounts said the program included eight 10,000-ton cruisers, 15 first class destroyers, and other vessels at a total cost of yen 400,000,000 ($4,000,000) covering six to eight years and overlapping by two years the present cruiser program.

The minister referred to the new program as the "cruiser replacement program" and said formal announcement was withheld in view of the disarmament discussions in London.

The domestic help problems to solved by using a kitchenette apartment and the 91 are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

MET HAS FINE FILM IN 'THE LADY LIES'

"THE LADY LIES," the new photoplay at the Metropolitan, is a fine example of what the films can do when they turn movie tradition topsyturvy. Herein, no moral is presented to the public; virtue is not rewarded, and two light ladies are the heroines of the whole entertainment to the very end. It is such an unusual and startling bit of film-craft that it will please everyone save the censors, who will possibly have to take to their beds for a week after one view of this stridently amusing photoplay.

Charles Ruggles

Claudette Colbert plays the heroine and plays her so well that it is evident this same Miss Colbert will be a star to reckon with from now on. The hero, if he is a hero, is competently characterized by Walter Huston, while Charles Ruggles as a most unvirtuous and libidinous gentleman, is pretty nearly a whole picture in himself.

For once, too, talk lends something to a picture. The dialogue is crisp, brilliant and rather startling to the very last line—which is something of a cinematic classic.

Two children also do some fairly competent acting, and they have roles to play that are the exact opposite of the usual juvenile screen characterizations. In short, they are two very modern and very tough youngsters with minds of their own.

So, too, is the entire film violently modern and quite well salted with the racier idioms of present day speech. It is not as smooth as one of Mr. Menjou's French farces, in fact, in spots it could be called quite rough, but it is entertaining from start to finish.

There is romance, of course, but very realistic romance. There are few respectable folk in the film, but against all precedent, they are treated very badly in the end, and the audience never sympathizes with them for a second. In short, "The Lady Lies" is one of the season's most surprising, startling and enjoyable films.

On the stage, a new band leader, Alex Keese, appears with the lavish presentation entitled "The Jazz Clock Store." Ben LaSalle and a talented cast of 17 appear in this lively show. Mr. Keese proved himself an exceedingly able director, and worthy of his big job on the Metropolitan stage.

Exploitation Chief Finishes Boston Job

Phil De Angelis, exploitation expert who has been "plastering" eastern Massachusetts with huge posters boosting the "Hollywood Revue" at the Tremont, left for New York today, having concluded his work in a hundred cities and town. He goes to Philadelphia to do similar work for the same production.

Before the "Hollywood Revue" his task was posting the world on the coming of "Four Feathers"; his task will be doing the same for the big "Dance of Life."

The places covered by Mr. De Angelis with his posters are:

Boston, Winthrop, Charlestown, Revere, Chelsea, Saugus, Lynn, Swampscott, Marblehead, Salem, Beverly, Hamilton, Wenham, Manchester, Magnolia, Gloucester, Rockport, Ipswich, Newburyport, Everett, Somerville, Medford, Malden, Melrose, Wakefield, Reading, Andover, Lowell, Lawrence, Haverhill, Merrimac, Cambridge, Arlington, Lexington, Concord, Ayer, Fitchburg, Leominster, Newton, Watertown, Brookline, Brighton, Allston, Waltham, Marlboro, Framingham, Waverley, Hudson, Maynard, Wayland, Sudbury, Framingham, Ashland, Milford, Franklin, Dedham, Walpole, Norwood, Sharon, Foxboro, Attleboro, North Attleboro, Mansfield, Attleboro, Wollaston, Quincy, Braintree, Holbrook, Randolph, Campello, Middleboro, Milton, Weymouth, Nantasket, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Duxbury, Kingston, Plymouth, Pembroke, Hanover, Rockland, Whitman, Abington, Bridgewater, Avon and Brockton.

Playgoers Will Suspend Two Weeks for Repairs

Owing to the necessity of repairing and repainting Brattle Hall for the season, the Playgoers will suspend production for two weeks, from Sept. 2 to Sept. 16. On Sept. 16, the theater will reopen with W. S. Gilbert's mythological comedy, Pygmalion and Galatea.

Katharine Warren will again be seen as Galatea, the statue which comes to life. The second production in the new season, opening on Monday, Sept. 23, will be Molnar's satirical drama, "The Devil," with Bruce DeLette in the title role.

"THE LADY LIES" is the title of the featured screen offering at the Metropolitan. It almost looks as though a confession is being made by the coy Claudette.

Activities of Film Folk Is New Picture Theme

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 30—Any little girl or boy living in Podunk who yearns to know something about where the film folk go for their recreation will be enlightened.

Louella O. Parsons

The Fox Company is about to make a Hollywood revue with the illuminating title of "Hollywood Nights." There will be five nights features!—one at the Coconut Grove at the Ambassador Hotel, one at the Montmarte, one in the Blossom Room of the Roosevelt Hotel and one at a beach party and one on a yacht.

So that the music will be in snappy accord with this peppy entertainment, special music has been written. The books, music and lyrics are by Con Conrad, Archie Goettler and Sydney Mitchell. James Tinghing will direct.

There will be very little for the film fans to know about Hollywood after the talkies have been here for awhile. Soon some inspired soul will offer a revue showing our film favorites at their homes. But it's all mighty interesting stuff.

GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER fired the imagination of the American reading public some 15 or 20 years ago with a fictional character by the name of "Get Rich Quick Wallingford." Everyone read about the adventures of this amusing gentleman, which appeared in serial form and sat in ill concealed impatience until the next one was published.

"Get Rich Quick Wallingford," and the choicest of his many adventures are to be filmed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with William Haines in the leading role. Billy is delighted with the chance to present so definite a characterization and there is little doubt he will do right by Mr. Chester's famous hero. James Cruze has put his John Hancock on a contract to direct Mr. Haines, and pretty Leila Hyams is slated as Billy's leading lady. "Fresh from College," meanwhile goes into cold storage to wait a later production date.

THERE doesn't seem a chance of Robert Armstrong ever getting away from playing prize fighters, even if he'd like to take a change of venue. It all started after he played the fighter in "Is Zat So," in James Gleason's stage success. He came West to play the same part and remained to furnish bigger and better celluloid pugilists. His latest move in that direction is to play opposite Fanny Brice in "The Champ," Gleason and Armstrong, who came into stage fame simultaneously, are both on the United Artists lot, Mr. Gleason with Harry Richman and Mr. Armstrong with Fanny Brice.

GEORGE FAWCETT can only be jealous of George Fawcett and can only accuse George Fawcett of stealing the spotlight in "One Man's Reunion," a Paramount production, because George Fawcett is the only man in the picture. This is a novelty by Robert Bruce, who made such excellent scenic films for Paramount Famous Players. He will produce a group of two-reel outdoor subjects and "One Man's Reunion," with Mr. Fawcett and a dog, as the sole member of the cast, will be the first of the series. The Yosemite Valley with its beautiful scenic background will furnish the necessary atmosphere.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Marion Davies reading a message received from the Zeppelin. Marion in a smart black dinner dress, reminding us that fall colors will soon be here. Irene Bordoni attracting more than usual interest in Max Factor's shop. Mary Pickford being escorted to a secluded booth for a manicure at Jim's beauty parlor. Dorothy Mackaill in a red sport dress entertaining with a luncheon party at the Montmarte. Seena Owen in white and yellow, one of the guests; also Pauline Garon and Lily Hey ward. Joan Bennett's mother being admired in the dining room at the Chateau Elysee. Evelyn Brent trying to see all her friends before she leaves for Europe. Ruby Keeler Jolson in blue sport dress at the Brown Derby. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

"The Come-on Girl"

"The Come-On Girl," Mary Nolan's second starring picture, will be directed by Harry Pollard. Miss Nolan has just finished "The Shanghai Lady" by John Colton, and Pollard has just completed the Owen Davis play, "Tonight at Twelve."

NEW FACES WITH CLIVE AT COPLEY

WHEN the curtain rings up at the Copley Theater tomorrow night patrons will look upon a number of new faces which Mr. Clive has assembled for his first production. Included in this are H Charles Crocker-King, recognized as one of the most interesting personalities on the English speaking stage; Murray Kinnell, for several years with George Arliss; Marshall Vincent, Arthur Stenning and Lorna Lawrence. The latter is a statuesque brunette of exquisite charm and talent. Among the former playegs at the Copley there still remains E. E. Clive (naturally), Elspeth Dudgeon, Richard Whorf, Ian Emery, Gerald Rogers and Herbert Belmore.

NEW MOVE AT SCOLLAY

THE Scollay Square is planning a series of midnight shows every Friday, starting at 11.15 p. m. The initial midnight performance takes place tonight. The usual evening prices will be in vogue. The attraction is Paramount's all-talking melodrama, "The Mysterious Dr. Fu Manchu." There will be a collection of specially selected short subjects to complete the program. It is intended to have this performance over in time so that the patrons may secure good transportation facilities home. For those who motor to the show, it is announced that they may park their cars in the neighborhood.

HOBO'S STORY ON WILBUR STAGE

SIX years ago a short, burly youth with a thatch of brick-colored hair drifted in from the "road" and got a job in a Hollywood publicity office. He made no effort to conceal the fact that he had been a hobo. But he wanted to do something new. Especially he wished to look Hollywood over. He could write well enough. At any rate the film men willingly paid him $25 a week.

Jim Tully

One day the publicity boys put their heads together and planned a series of articles to be entitled "What Life Means to Me." The idea appealed to everyone in the organization from the directors to the "extras." It was a novel outlet for their enthusiasm. But the article the ex-hobo turned in was sent right back to him. It was too bitter and alarming. It would never do.

But under the title of "A Declaration," it was accepted by one of the forward thinking magazines. As soon as it appeared Jim Tully became a man of literature.

He was out of a job as soon as the monthly containing the story reached the coast. But he didn't care. He knew he could write stuff that would sell. More than that, he had the audacity to write as with the lid off.

Movie Queen

LEE SMITH

"Madame X" Actor Is Native of Ireland

Holmes Herbert, the screen veteran who has the role of Noel in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's all-talk version of "Madame X," at Loew's State next week, was born in Dublin, Ireland, and was educated at Nottingham High School and Rugby. His first stage experience was in "The Octoroon" at the age of eight, produced on the stage of Sander's Wells Theater, London. For twelve years, he was on the stage in London or on tour in the English provinces.

Herbert entered motion pictures in the role of Philip Nolan in "The Man Without a Country." During his early screen career he played opposite Elsie Ferguson, Dorothy Dalton, Mae Murray and Pauline Frederick.

ONE of the best programs to be heard in tonight's varied broadcasts is the Cities Service concert which comes to Boston and New England patrons through WEEI and over the NBC system. The piece de resistance will be the playing of Drdla's reminiscent composition, "Souvenir," by Sascha Jideiman, violinist. Under the direction of Rosario Bourdon, the orchestra will present Rubenstein's "Ballet Suite" from the opera "Feramors." The Cavaliers quartette will sing a special arrangement of the spiritual, "Steal Away," and John Seagle, baritone, will be heard.

THE voice of Norman Brokenshire will usher in the tuneful "Isle of Golden Dreams," played by native musicians during the Hawaii Shadows program over WNAC and the Columbia system at 8 o'clock. Sway to the fascinating rhythm of "Kohoki," "Hawaiian Wedding Song" and "Aloha Oe," as they are chanted by the Islanders. Instrumental selections include "Isle of Golden Dreams," "Cho Cho San," and "Where Is the Song of Songs for Me," with vocal accompaniment.

THE DOG WAGON, what it means to the circus, and the story of one of its inhabitants, "Desty," will be told by Bob Sherwood in the Dixie Circus program which comes, as usual, from WBZ. Breeding and pedigree mean, little in the making of a good circus dog, according to the former Bachman blown, and a love for the excitement of circus life easily sets a good dog above less common denizens of the Big Top. All dog lovers will appreciate this broadcast.

BUZZING WITH GOSSIP about Gus and the Widow Biddle, the Schradertown Band will hold its regular weekly practice in the town hall at 7:30, while friends and admirers eavesdrop through station WEEI. Joe, the pickle player, blurts out to Louie the ferrule player, who has stolen the widow's love. Louie sets out to slam his garage partner silent, when he comes the fascinating cause of it all. Gus is through with Louie forever, at least until next band practice. Arthur Pryor will wield the baton.

Three old favorites will be revived by the orchestra on the Castilla Theatre program broadcast from WBZ at 8:30. "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree" dates back to the time when Pa took Ma to the World's Fair at St. Louis and "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" harks back past the turn of the century. Also "I'll Be Your Tootsie Wootsie"—Oh, boy, them was the days. During the program Graham McNamee will deliver another of his shrewd summaries of sports news of the week.

ADDING ONE MORE gem to Philco's already notable list of operettas, Philco Hour will broadcast "The Geisha," using the ever-fascinating theme of the romance of western man and oriental maid. The Geisha's beautiful music makes this English operetta equal in delightful qualities to "Madame Butterfly." Those who have heard Jessica Dragonette rehearsing the role of O Mimosa San, assumed by her singing to the original maid, starred by Marie Tempest at Daly's Theater in London in 1896, the role of Lieut. Fairfax will be taken by Henry Shope.

A tiny cafe with tables on the street in a Panama city is the background for tonight's True Story offering through WNAC. Story offering through WNAC. The program provided Mary and Bob with a point of vantage from which to observe dark-eyed senoritas and hear soul-stirring native music. This scene fades into tragic night as Mary and Bob hear the first hand the story of a young widow and her struggle to resist the love of a handsome lad. Had she acted wisely? Perhaps the radio audience can answer the question. "Down Every Man Kill the Thing He Loves?"

Another new morning feature is the program of dialogue sketches during the National Home hour broadcast from station WEEI. This series began a week ago and will continue for five more weeks over 19 stations in the NBC red network.

WOMAN SAVES AGED MAN FROM FIRE

Wayland, Aug. 30—Mrs. Francis Stearns rescued an 82 year-old man during a fire which caused $20,000 damage to the First Parish Unitarian Church, and later aided in saving priceless antiques in the edifice.

The church, built in 1814, was the first in Wayland and has long been widely noted among architects.

The aged man rescued by Mrs. Stearns is James Bryden who has been janitor of the church for more than 50 years. The church is closed during August, and was to be reopened next Sunday. He started the oil heater in the kitchen and was upstairs in the auditorium using hot water and cloths to clean the pulpit when he smelled smoke.

Mrs. Stearns, living next door to the church, saw the smoke and ran to aid the janitor in an effort to put out the fire. In a few seconds she realized that the task was beyond her power, and so started upstairs with the intention of ringing the church bell one can do as Paul Revere; but the rope was too thick and she had to scream.

In the kitchen he was nearly overcome by smoke pouring in a corner. She aided him part dragging and partly carrying to the outside. He recovered about five minutes later. Meanwhile Mrs. Stearns ran back to the kitchen in hope of saving a memento more than 100 years old, which her grandmother, Mrs. William Stearns had given to the church.

Man Killed at Grade Crossing

Portland, Me., Aug. 30—Charles F. W. Stockton, 60, a former alderman of this city, was instantly killed when his automobile was struck by a Boston & Maine passenger train on the Brackett crossing in Scarboro. He was alone in the car.

COLORFUL SEA PARADE AT MARBLEHEAD

One of the most colorful of all the floats which have entered Marblehead harbor in the last 200 years was gathered in these waters for the tercentenary celebration of the town.

Along the shores 75,000 eager watchers of the sea parade take the efforts of extra details of police assigned to handle the crowd. All traffic records went by the board for even excepting the figures with the birth of a Nation celebration in 1876.

One hundred craft of various sizes and types were brilliantly decorated with festoons significant of great days in Marblehead history or depicting unique corners of the world.

Starting from Marblehead Neck at seven o'clock in the morning, the parade of boats began its long trek through the coves of Marblehead and Harbor and back to the starting point at the Boston Corinthian and Eastern Yacht Clubs. While the parade was in progress the officials of the town of Marblehead were entertained by Capt. W. E. C. Oates and the warehouse officers of the Cape town.

Sweeping scarlet flights played over the scene and as each gaily decorated craft came within range of the lights the crowd on the shore applauded heartily.

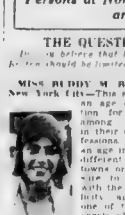
The young people of Marblehead were participants in one of the most picturesque and appealing spectacles of the celebration when before the crowds of towns folk and visitors who lined the streets of the business section they passed in quaint colonial costumes and trundling decorated carriages or carts, or riding behind gaily bedecked and ponies.

The Curious Quizzer

Persons at North Station Answer His Question and Pose for Pictures

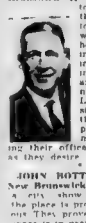
THE QUESTION

Do you believe that buildings in Boston should be limited in height?



MISS BUDDY M. BRETEMPS, New York City—This seems to be an age of competition for leadership among individuals in their chosen professions. It is also an age in which the different cities, towns or states are vie to hing over with the and of publicity agents, how one of those places excels all others as the best place for outsiders to visit and spend money. New York has its skyscrapers and super high buildings are now under construction there. Boston is noted for its low story, but to be more progressive there should be no limit set on property owners when they contemplate building structures with the sky as the limit. I attended every fight at the new Boston Garden. I am sure that if that sporting arena were higher it would be one of the city's greatest assets.

MRS. NATHANIEL P. BURT, Ellsworth, Kansas—Although we have no such buildings in the world of low home I do not think New York should be copied as far as possible in building construction. The buildings in Boston are high in comparison with those of some smaller cities but I would enjoy coming to this city more if there were more of the New York atmosphere. I am stopping on the 13th floor of the Statler Hotel and enjoy looking from the windows every morning. The higher the buildings the better appearance they make, and I believe there should be no law limiting buildings to a certain height.



R. D. GAYNOR, McAdam, New Brunswick—It is worth the trip to Boston to see that wonderful Custom House on the water front. Down home we have nothing approaching it in the line of buildings. High buildings are great advertisements for a city. Land is so expensive in big cities that nothing should prevent business men from constructing their offices buildings as high as they desire.

JOHN BOTTOMLEY, McAdam, New Brunswick—High buildings in a city show that the place is prosperous. They prove that space is in great demand and I believe that an owner of a small parcel of land in a business district which is assessed highly should be productive of as much revenue as possible. To obtain all the income such a piece of property is capable of producing, there should be no law made to prevent the owner from building in the space above, regardless of how high he sees fit to construct. Boston seems behind such cities as Chicago and New York, when its business men are restricted by municipal laws from constructing buildings over a certain height.

Endurance Flier Sued by First Wife

St. Louis, Aug. 30—Mrs. Hazel Bauer of New York, divorced wife of Forest O'Brine, has filed suit against the co-pilot of the world endurance flight championship plane "St. Louis Robin."

She asks for $9000 for maintenance and support of the 15-year-old daughter.

Mrs. Bauer claims the divorce was granted on grounds of desertion and nonsupport in 1917.

DENIES PRISON RIOT DANGER IN BAY STATE

Dr. A. Warren Stearns, state commissioner of correction, today declined to confirm rumors that the state prison has been armed against a threatened outbreak by the prisoners.

"My visit to the prison yesterday was for the purpose of trying out the chow there," he said. "I talked at some length with Warden Hogsett, but nothing was said to me about threats of outbreaks or conditions of unrest among the prisoners."

The warden told me of a few complaints of a minor nature, and as said that some of the prisoners in the Cherry Hill section, where the dangerous convicts are confined, were complaining a little.

I told him that it was only natural that men of that sort, confined as they are, should be discontented.

I was surprised to find the food so good. As a matter of fact, the prisoners thanked me for the improvement, but I told them that that was Warden Hogsett's work and not mine. My visit was just a matter of course."

LABOR BODY TO STUDY "L" PROBLEM

Joseph J. Cabral, president of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, following out the action of that body at its recent convention at Lowell, announces the makeup of the committee that will make a thorough survey of the El control problem.

The announcement was made at the meeting of the executive council of the federation at its headquarters in the Lawyers' building Beacon st.

The creating of such a committee was recommended by the committee on resolutions and unanimously adopted by the convention as a means of disposing of two opposing resolutions bearing on the El situation submitted early in the convention.

The committee appointed by President Cabral is as follows: Pierce Quinlan, president; Timothy J. Regan, business agent; Michael J. Walsh, secretary, and Peter F. Murphy, Boston; Carmena Union; James T. Moriarty, Sheet Metal Workers; Charles Campfield, Machinists' Local 264, and E. A. Johnson, secretary of the United Building Trades Council of Boston and vicinity.

Dempsey Wins Bout With Senators

Madison Wis., Aug. 30—Jack Dempsey won a technical victory over the Wisconsin Senate today.

A resolution inviting him to address the upper house of the Wisconsin Legislature was rejected by that body. Several members argued that they were there for business and not entertainment. Jack is showing at a local theater.

Dempsey looked in on their business." It didn't seem so important to them then. No Senator objected when he was invited to address the Senate, and accepted.

"I understand you're a very scrappy Senate," Dempsey said. "I can't sing and I can't dance, but just to be sociable, I'll scrap anyone in the House."

Senators, who would jump at such a challenge from any of their colleagues, laughed this off.

"The world-famous pugilist," he was introduced by Lieut.-Gov. Henry A. Huber, thanked the lawmakers for their part in enactment of boxing bills and asked consideration of legislation favorable to the sport.

HUB SURGEON FIGHTS TO SAVE LADY HEATH

BOSTON DAY by DAY

By FRED TOYE

THE SHELL-LIKE ears of Boston's femininity are bearing an unholy burden of fashion these days. The dernier cri from Paris is the pearl stud. The bigger, the better. Gurlish ears have been waving in the breeze for some months past, and now they are beginning to hide their nakedness once more under jewelry. Today the office imp wandered in stoop-shouldered weighted down with pearl ear-disks at least an inch and a quarter in diameter.

IN THE quagmire of this column of yesterday's date there was passing reference to Kliegel lights. In the course of things, Kliegel lights came into print as "Klieg" lights, in true movie form. Every movie fan has read of Klieg lights, although such things are not strictly part and parcel of movie technique.

The development of artificial lighting in the movie world has been one of the many romantic growths in the flicker-film industry. The term "Kliegel lights" is used advisedly, out of the lingering memories which cling to the reformed showman. For years upon years, the Kliegel brothers, stage electricians, were the comfort and reliance of theatrical managers the country over. The problem of lighting a show was safe in their hands. With batteries of spots, bunch lights, baby spots, colored gelatines and masks, they brought atmosphere and color to thousands of stage spectacles.

It was only natural that the skill and resourcefulness of these talented German-American stage technicians would have been called upon to supply artificial sunshine for movie studio work. Mercury lamps and arcs were manipulated and developed into standard picture equipment, and now these former stage electricians are mighty props for one of America's greatest industries.

THE MOTION PICTURE industry owes much to Boston for its present greatness. Boston vision and Boston finance have made possible many of the great strides which have put the movies into Wall and State sts., alongside U. S. Steel, American Telephone and other industrials.

THERE IS AN interesting movie triumvirate of Boston men who have done spectacular things to unify the industry. Guy W. Currier, Joseph P. Kennedy and Joseph W. Powell have been associated in many important reorganization and production enterprises. Their activities have been chiefly concerned with F. B. O. The mighty amalgamation of Radio-Keith-Orpheum and their far-reaching ramifications came about largely as a result of Mr. Kennedy's organizing genius. He made a brilliant record in Boston finance, and has one of the most interesting families to be found in New England. Mrs. Kennedy is the former Rose Fitzgerald, daveted mother, charming hostess and a daughter of former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald.

GUY W. CURRIER, Boston banker and attorney, has a hand in countless motion picture projects, including the financing of productions and of producing organizations. He is likewise interested in maritime commerce, and is a member of the recently created Port of Boston commission.

SHIPS AND CINEMAS hold almost equal place in the heart of Joseph W. Powell. Trained as a naval architect, he arrived at nation-wide celebrity when he was appointed president of the Bethlehem Ship Building Corporation at Fore River during the World War. He was one of the youngest executives ever to have been honored with such an important appointment. He gives much time and thought to furthering the interests of Boston's sea trade. He is a director of the Maritime Association, and with Currier and Louis E. Kirstein, makes up the Port of Boston commission, which has the vast responsibility of safeguarding the city's interests in all that concerns our valuable waterfront, the waterways and the shipping which spell prosperity for a great section of the nation.

QUICK ACTION is more than a mere slogan for Louis J. Mathieu, public relations director for the trustees of the Boston Elevated Railway. On the day of the opening of the Milton Extension on the Dorchester Rapid Transit line, the Boston Evening American called attention to the lack of transfers for bus passengers at the Milton terminal. Within half an hour he had the matter adjusted. Mathieu is a Harvard man and a resident of Dorchester. He has traveled extensively, and before taking up his present work was editor of the State House news service.

HUB SURGEON FIGHTS TO SAVE LADY HEATH

Dr. Elliott C. Cutler, Formerly of Harvard, Performed Operation on Flier

The life of Lady Mary Heath, England's famous aviatrix, injured in a plane crash in Cleveland yesterday, was hanging in the balance early today.

At 7 it was stated that if the aviatrix survives the next 36 hours her recovery may be expected, although she will never be able to fly again.

According to some reports, Lady Heath may be blinded for life.

The famous flier, who holds the world's long distance solo flight record for women, was operated on by Dr. Elliott C. Cutler, prominent brain specialist and the resident surgeon of Lakeside Hospital. He formerly was an instructor at Harvard Medical School, Boston.

Several pieces of bone pressing against Lady Heath's brain were removed.

She was injured when the new Great Lake bi-plane she was testing preparatory to its use in the national races, crashed through the roof of a loft building here.

Lady Heath is in the hands of an expert, with Dr. Elliott C. Cutler of Western Reserve University in attendance, in the opinion of eminent Boston medical men.

Dr. Cutler made an enviable reputation in Boston hospitals. Many physicians here recall the unusual operation he performed at Peter Bent Brigham hospital whereby he saved the life of a young West End girl.

The child was threatened with death from an emerged heart valve. Dr. Cutler bared the heart and performed the delicate operation of opening the contracted orifice. He then placed his finger in the orifice to open it and cure the valvular trouble. At the time it is said such an operation should be attempted only as a last resort.

Before going to Western Reserve University Dr. Cutler was a member of Harvard Medical School faculty. He was a member of a Harvard crew when he attended the university in Cambridge. Two of his brothers, John C. and Roger, were Harvard crew captains. The former was also captain of a Harvard football team.

Sir James Heath Won't Seek Reconciliation

London, Aug. 30 (INS)—The tragic accident that has befallen Lady Mary Heath will have no effect in bringing about a reconciliation between herself and her multi-millionaire husband, Sir James Heath, British industrialist.

Sir James said today he had no intention of going to America to be at his wife's bedside. He indicated that even the fact she is reported to be near death would not influence him to seek a reconciliation.

1000 CHILDREN IN PAGEANT

More than 1000 Lynn school children took part in a grand pageant at Barry playground as part of the closing exercises of the playgrounds.

Costumes of all nations were in the colorful display. Folk dances of various races and tribes were depicted.

TO IGNORE CALL OF TREASURY

Although both Henry I. Shattuck and R. Loring Young are considering Shattuck on his right ample when off the coast of Maine and Young in the White Mountains, friends assert that neither of them would be interested in appointment to the U. S. Treasury Department.

Washington news dispatches recently have mentioned Shattuck and Young as possible successors to Henry Herrick Bond, who has resigned his position as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

A close friend of both Shattuck and Young said that he believed Young prefers to continue in his law practice here and that Shattuck is so much pleased with his work as treasurer of Harvard that he would not think of leaving it for a U. S. Treasury post.

The girls are the daughters of Charles Caradonna, a Quincy square owner. From their first school years they have received convent instruction at Jackman, Me. The girls were brought nearer home this year that their parents might see them more often.

The girls anticipated their return to school this autumn with a hook of learning and the classic fields.

Son and Daughter Charge Peabody Man Was Drunk and Under Woman's Influence

With Shea arrayed against his stepmother, Mrs Bridget G Shea, who received all her husband's property and $25,000 life insurance in his will, Mrs A Shea Barrett, also the recipient of $1 under the terms of the will

Shea's father-in-law owns the restaurant in which he works, and Mrs Shea, 24 years old, is employed as a waitress. They have a six year old daughter

FIGHT NEXT FRIDAY

Shea's widow was employed by him as bookkeeper before their marriage in 1925. She is alleged by his children to have exercised undue influence over him and to have been responsible for the terms of the will

First skirmish in the will battle will take place next Friday in equity court when there will be heard a petition to restrain the widow from disposing of the insurance, already paid to her

The children of the former mayor claim that a substantial portion of the insurance was taken out by the deceased prior to his second marriage and that it was first made payable to them

CHARGE FATHER DRANK

Young Shea was secretary to his father during two of his four years as mayor and before his father's second marriage was actively engaged with him in his business

He is a World War veteran and was gassed in action

He and his sister allege their father to have been strongly addicted to the use of liquor and that by 1925 he was continually under its influence

Woman Runs Business on Fish Pier

The only woman in the working end of the trade at Boston Fish Pier is Mrs. Josephine Lyons of Barbieri rd., Winthrop, mother and grandmother to her own and as good as mother to the men who go down to the sea in ships

Mrs. Lyons, collection manager of the Dehydrating Fish Co., in Northern ave., has had a colorful career in her 21 years of business.

In a little office above the street of the world's biggest fish mart, she controls the destinies of nearly 100 tons of fish castoffs daily and turns them into real money.

Glue and fishmeal, two of the principal by-products of fish are started on their way through her department.

IN MANY ROLES

In addition to that she has bandaged the wounded, settled fiery arguments, broken up fights and through it all has made a legion of friends

"There isn't a stranger that comes in here," she confided, "but what that phone rings and the boys are inquiring if the stranger is welcome and is there any trouble?"

A narrow flight of stairs leads to her office

More than a score of years ago, Mrs. Lyons suffered the loss of her husband.

She decided to turn her hand to business.

Her father had been in the trade and his father before him followed the industry—so to fish she turned her hand.

Weighed down by her great loss yet buoyed by the thoughts of her two growing boys, Mrs. Lyons entered the business world in the employ of Charles Elwell of Rockport.

The business of women was apparent and she rose to her present position

Her sons, now grown to manhood have often times asked her to quit the business world but the fascination is there.

"Don't you find it a little out of the ordinary to be working among men?" she was asked.

"PAYS TRIBUTE TO MEN"

Here she paid a glowing tribute to the men who supply our markets with the tasty sea food

"At first it was strange, to be sure," she mused.

"But underneath those scaly shirts and gruff appearance there are hearts that beat as nobody knows better than I

"I have never been insulted nor have had even a harsh word cast at me from any of the men. They are real pals to work with."

Before the first aid station was established at the pier, Mrs. Lyons was thrust into the role of combination doctor and nurse and even adviser as the men unfolded their woes.

Even today a roll of bandage is in her desk, ready for minor cuts that fall to the lot of fishermen.

Mother to Fish Folk

Mrs. Josephine Lyons of Winthrop is the only woman who manages a business on Boston's Fish Pier. For more than a score of years she has been mother and nurse to the men of the fishing fleet. Photo shows Mrs. Lyons bandaging an injured thumb for Atkins Barrio of Waterford. (Staff photo.)

1800 at Session of Teachers' Institute

CHURCH WON'T ACT IN WOES OF CLERIC

Pastor Common's Divorce Suit His Own Business

A report that Congregational Church officials would take a hand in the religious disputes which have caused the Rev. Walter H Commons, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Waltham, to institute divorce proceedings was denied by those in authority in that church.

The report had arisen since the filing of the suit by the Rev. Mr Commons, who charges that his wife, Evelyn, was cruel and abusive to him on several instances in the course of 20 years, because he and she disagreed over religious beliefs.

He charges that when they were living at Whitinsville, on April 1, 1924 and at other times and places "because of divergent religious beliefs" she had been cruel and abusive to him by words and act.

And on December 1 1926, he alleges, at their home, on Welling st., Waltham, she struck him, in the course of an argument over religion.

The rumors in Congregational circles have been to the effect that the minister is a "modernist," and that his flock held to older theories of congregationalism. George A. Mansfield, secretary of the ministers' church, stated that there is no tribunal in the Congregational church which can try a minister for his views. Each minister is supreme in his own congregation, he declared, and the congregation itself must take any action which is deemed necessary. That the Waltham congregation will take such action he denied.

CURLEY CAMPS UNDER NOSE OF FIN COM.

Former Mayor's Campaign Headquarters Bristling With Activity

Curley campaign headquarters, strategically located on Province st., almost within the shadow of City Hall, which former Mayor James M Curley hopes to occupy once more, were already beginning to attract visitors today.

The headquarters is located at 22 Province st., on the third floor of the Five Cents Saving Bank building.

Although open only a few hours the redeavous of the Curley forces was well populated as soon as the city began stirring.

The vanguard of the expected army of volunteer workers, well-wishers, and political scouts was assembling, and final preparations for the prospective battle of ballots were under way

Almost directly above the Curley P. C., are the offices of the Finance Commission, popularly styled "watchdogs of the city treasury." "Fin Com" members will be able to hear Curley's campaign speeches merely by leaving their windows open on the fifth floor of the Five Cent Savings Bank building.

Ex-Mayor Curley came up from the beach to supervise the opening of his campaign headquarters and to shake the hands and acknowledge the good wishes of the hundreds of friends who called as soon as word was passed round.

On the large plate glass windows of the new shop were placed life-sized portraits of the candidate bearing the legend "For Mayor, Vote for James M. Curley." The store is equipped with a broad platform in the rear from which speakers could address several hundred listeners, before resorting to the auditors which will enable them to reach an audience of thousands in Province, Bromfield and School sts. and in the front offices of City Hall.

First work will be the obtaining of signatures to nomination papers which will be issued Tuesday and a drive to restore, within the next 30 days, 58,000 names dropped from the city's voting list since last year.

FAILS TO NAME RECEIVER

A receiver for the Superior Credit Corp. of Worcester, successor of the L. A. W. Acceptance Corp., was refused by Judge Lummus of the Suffolk Superior Court, after he had been told the preferred stockholders had passed a vote of confidence in the present management

He remarked that the preferred stockholders ought to control the company, but the significance of their 2-to-1 vote was to the effect that if they had control they would elect the present management, which now controls by reason of ownership of the Class A voting stock, but has no financial interest in the corporation.

Today is baby Sally's birthday. But candles will not add to any merriment.

Between sobs, Mrs. Schertell told her plight.

"We were never so hard up as right now," she said. "The baby has been ill. Billy was bitten by a dog and my aunt whom I looked to for aid, was hurt in an automobile accident. Bad luck comes in bunches. I've never complained before, but when my husband came home and told me he had lost the pay envelope, I couldn't stand it any longer. I had to tell someone."

The commission announced that a hearing will be held at 10.30 a. m., September 3, in the commission's rooms at police headquarters on the proposal for barring trucks from important streets in suburban sections.

Residents say they have been unable to sleep because of the noise.

The streets proposed for the truck ban are Morsina st., West Roxbury, from Center st. to the Arborway; Greenmount st., Dorchester, from Dorchester ave. to Pleasant st.; Rexford st., Dorchester, from Blue Hill ave. to Cummins Highway; Perham st., West Roxbury, from the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad tracks to Baker st.

Cranberry Crop in Bay State Is Safe

Massachusetts' 1929 cranberry crop, jeopardized for a time by the protracted drought, is safe, according to reports received by the State Department of Agriculture. The reports also indicate that the worst of the drought, so far as crops are concerned, is over.

Reports to the department, from all sections of the State also reveal that the pasturage is getting green again, and should result in a normal flow of milk by the middle of September. There will be no second crop of hay this year, although onion, tobacco and ensilage corn crops are doing well at the present time.

SLASHER ELUDES GUARDS, FLEES FROM HUB DEPORTATION CAMP

FEDERAL MEN IN HUNT FOR BRAZILIAN

Yonth, Convicted of Stabbing, Stages Escape While Exercising

United States agents and police joined in a search for Francesco Louro, 22, a Brizilian slated for deportation to his native country, who escaped while exercising in the yard of the East Boston Immigration station with 15 other immigrants.

Despite an immediate alarm, which called out all of the immigration officers to join in the search, Louro, who had been at the station since July 11, after being sent there from Hartford, Conn., where he had been sentenced to three months in jail on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon, made good his escape.

It was first feared that Louro, in fleeing under the wharf of the American Stay Co., might have been drowned. This fear was dispelled, however, when it was learned there was not sufficient water at the point at the time, due to low tide. It was finally believed that after getting under the wharf, he ran along under the building to a point where he was able to get out onto the wharf and again escape to Marginal st.

The man made his escape during the exercising period. Before the chase for him could start, after the guards saw him leap a six-foot iron fence, 15 minutes elapsed while the guards herded the other immigrants into the building and gave the alarm. Boston police were notified and joined in the search.

EX-RUM SQUAD "CZAR" BACK

Oliver B Garrett, deposed head of the liquor squad at Boston police headquarters, after nine years of service is expected back on the job as a "harness cop" tonight.

Garrett's vacation is officially concluded as the police week begins on a Friday, and it is expected that he will report for uniform duty at 3:45 o'clock this evening for assignment at the Joy st. station.

Patrolman Garrett was injured in a horse-racing accident at the Marshfield Fair a week ago and it was thought that he would be incapacitated for some time, but word was received at headquarters that he is already for work. He has been discharged from the private hospital where he received treatment and word was that he was in shape to report.

It is expected that Officer Garrett will be used at the South Bill in on the routes of officers who are on days off or on vacation, but within a short time he will be given a permanent route in the West End.

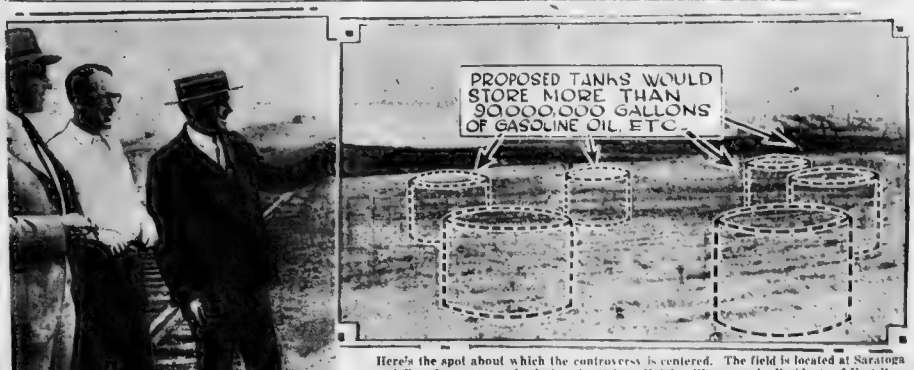
Garrett has not been in uniform since he was assigned to liquor squad activities nine years ago.

Prof. Perkins Tells of Needs of China

Hyannis, Aug. 30 (AP)—There is pressing need for adequate international machinery to deal with the question of concessions and special privileges in China, Prof Dexter Perkins of the Univ. of Rochester told the Institute of World Unity in the last of a series of lectures dealing with current international affairs here today.

Turning to Japan, Prof. Perkins said that the Japanese, who 10 years ago seemed likely to develop an aggressive policy in the Orient, had come to realize that a policy of force in China was filled with dangerous possibilities.

East Boston Marshals Its Forces for War Over Oil Tanks



J. J. McElroy G. C. Carson Alexander Sullivan

Three leaders in the campaign to forestall the proposal to establish an oil farm in East Boston. McElroy is superintendent of the Maverick Mills, Carson is president of the Orient Heights Laundry Co. and Sullivan is president of the East Boston Betterment Assn.

Here's the spot about which the controversy is centered. The field is located at Saratoga and Boardman sts. and adjoins the Orient Heights Playground. Residents of East Boston propose to fight the project bitterly, and, as an opening shot, a protest petition is being circulated. Opponents claim that the erection of the tanks would drive hundreds of residents out of the district. (Staff photos.)

"Fixing" Story Nets Liquor Arrest

Peter Bowley of Groton st., South End, said by the police to have thought he had "fixed" things, was in the municipal court as the result of a raid by the police headquarters liquor squad.

On pleading not guilty he was held in $200 for a hearing Sept. 6, on a charge of keeping and exposing liquor for sale at his address.

According to his alleged story to the police, two men visited his lodging house and asked for liquor; a third man came and when a quart was produced the latter said he would take care of the matter if Bowley would produce $100; that he got $50 together and was to see the men the following morning and give them $200; and then shortly thereafter in came the liquor squad. Bowley was bewildered and told the squad what had happened. The police are now looking for the "fixing" trio.

CAN'T AGREE ON JUDGESHIP

A patronage dispute among the Republican organizations of three New England States is holding up President Hoover's selection of a judge of the United States circuit court of appeals in the first judicial court here.

Although Judge Charles F. Johnson, former United States senator from Maine, resigned some months ago, the vacancy is still unfilled and apparently Republican leaders in Massachusetts, Maine and Rhode Island are no nearer an agreement than they were early in the summer.

The first circuit embraces the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and the island of Porto Rico. The sitting justices are George W. Anderson of Massachusetts and George H. Bingham of New Hampshire.

Family Driven Out by Fire in Peabody

One family was driven to the street and a dozen others in nearby tenements were packing their belongings to be in readiness for flight when fire swept a three-story frame building at 29 Proctor st., Peabody.

The fire started in a grocery store on the first floor, swept up to the two tenements on the upper floors and menaced the nearby buildings until firemen, after a stiff battle of more than an hour, succeeded in getting the flames under control. The cause of the fire is to be investigated by the fire department, officials announced.

Outlook Bright for Hub Seaplanes

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

The bright outlook of the seaplane business in Boston was demonstrated when seven seaplanes were cleared from the harbor floats. The ships, all with a mission, were of different makes.

First, there was the Airvia Transportation Company's two planes out, morning and afternoon, and two planes in. These ships are Savoia-Marchetti, twin-hulled boats, seating 12 passengers and two pilots. Then there was a Loening amphibian owned by Curtiss which brought a passenger from New York to his home in Pride's Crossing, Beverly. The pilot, Jack "King" Arthur, stopped at the Curtiss float off the south end of the airport for gas and oil. After receiving the weather report, he returned to New York.

With two passengers who had to reach Boston and New York, in a hurry, Harold Moon, pilotting an Ireland, powered with a Whirlwind J-6 300 horsepower motor, took off from the Curtiss station in Rockland, Me. One of his passengers boarded the Colonial tri-motor to New York, and the other passenger used the speedboat from the landing to South Station.

Another Ireland, powered with a J 5 Whirlwind, 225 horsepower, was flown around the harbor by Harold "Waco" Crowley, for Curtiss. Several trips were made with sightseers.

This goes to show that while the Boston Airport is undergoing a complete overhauling, the planes that land on the water are well on their way to final development as passenger carriers around Boston coastline.

"The time is not far distant, when the seaplane will be used almost exclusively for air travel in the eastern part of the New England States," said Paul Micelli, chief of the Curtiss Marine Division in Boston. "This side of the flying business has not been scratched and we aim to sell the public the idea that a seaplane can take them where a land plane cannot."

How about this chap Crowley. He is a relation to Frank C. Crowley, the Boston-New York air mail pilot. Harold showed a cool head when the unfortunate Ted Devereux met his end early in the week. The wrecked plane was outside the bulkhead that crosses the north side of the airport and there was no way to bring the bodies in. The waiting ambulance "Waco" without a word to anyone, jumped into his seaplane and flew to the wreck, landing in a puddle that didn't look deep enough to float a peanut shell.

Two trips were necessary to bring the three bodies to the landing float.

It is such instances as this that keeps a little romance and thrill in the aircraft business.

With his Great Lakes overhauled after a minor accident, Doc Gately of East Boston, is once more cruising about the air lanes, with Al Anderson at the controls.

Anderson test-hopped the ship and upon coming down, watched Doc climb into the front cockpit.

Having taken up a collection among the Curtiss employes, and others, including newspapermen, Hiram Bean of the Curtiss office force, presented Elmer Rodgers, first lieutenant in the army air corps who is returning to be posted as advanced flight instructor at Kelley Field, Texas, with costly pair of goggles. "Rodge" girl was not forgotten either. Rodgers was given a beautiful loving cup, with the following inscribed on the side, "To Gloria, from Curtiss Flying Service admirers."

Looking for a Whirwind motored airplane, Danny Duggan chief pilot for the Evergreen Flying Service of Fall River, arrived in a Travel Air.

Danny said he was buying the Whirlwind job for "Red" Chapman, who acquired the Harvard Flying Club's Travel Air. Chapman is tired of OXX 6 engines and wants to get something that will take him places without sitting down every other hour.

Perhaps a record for sales of used airplanes was made by the present week by Leo "Skip" Tracy of the Curtiss sales force. "Skip," formerly connected with the Spring field station of Curtiss, sold two Waco 10s and an OXX 6 Travel Air. The Wacos went to Bill Rivard and Arthur Pierce. Rivard is operating from the White Mountain House, Fabyan, N. H. with Joe Gould flying for him. Pierce, of the Pierce Motor Sales, Leominster, has about 60 hours of solo flying and is buying the ship to continue piling up time. The Travel Air went to Charles Trego of Smithtown. Trego will take instruction and get his flying time on the ship.

Indictment of Byron Jones, one of the alleged Hutchinson jewelry thieves under arrest in New York is to be asked by the Cambridge police on the charge of breaking and entering the home of Stanley Lawton, Lakeview ave., Cambridge the night of June 7.

START PROTEST ON OIL FARM PETITION

Douglass Leads East Boston Fight Against Erection of Tanks

With Congressman John J. Douglass of East Boston designated as the official leader, the fight against the proposal to establish a seven million-gallon oil tank farm on a 4-acre development next to the Orient Heights playground at Saratoga and Boardman sts. was given impetus today with the circulation of a petition of protest.

Following a conference with the political and civic leaders of the district Precinct Chairman Timothy F. Donovan of the City Council stated that he will act as spokesman for the residents at the public hearing which will be granted by the board of street commissioners at City Hall on September 18, and Congressman Douglass has volunteered his services as attorney without charge.

President Donovan declared that the people of the district have been aroused to a fever pitch by the threatened invasion of the oil tank farm and that more than two-thirds of the petition will be obtained before the date of the public hearing.

Not only do these real estate operators, known as the Boston Port Development Company seek to open a storage plant, said President Donovan, "but their blueprint plans on file at City Hall reveal that they plan to operate what amounts to a practical refinery.

"They expect to build a laboratory, boiler house, pump house mixing or solution tanks and gas and oil blending batteries. To all intents and purposes, it would constitute a refinery, a plant so dangerous that none have been allowed to operate within the city limits.

"The plant would be right next to the Orient Heights playgrounds within a few yards of three public schools and within a short walking distance of hundreds of people who make their homes in East Boston," said Councillor Donovan.

They would put the tanks on the land fronting on Saratoga st., the most dangerous traffic artery in the entire district," protested Councillor Donovan. He announced that although the property is now held by real estate operators they are seeking the gas permit so that they can sell the property to a new oil company which is making a bid for business in the East according to rumors in East Boston.

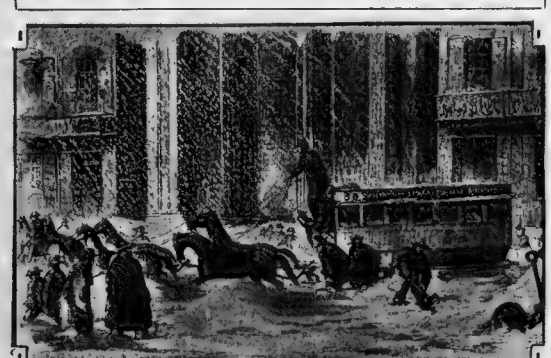
Old Boston in Pictures—No. 44



THERE actually was such a thing as the old-fashioned winter. According to Ballou's Pictorial, snow was 10 feet deep in Boston on the day in 1857 when some artist took pencil in frosty fingers to draw the above sketch, published through courtesy of Boston Athaneum. It took six steeds that winter to haul the Jamaica Plain horse-car. This is the 44th of a series of scenes of Boston in bygone days. Another will appear in the Boston Evening American tomorrow.

DONIE BUSH, given the air as manager for the second time in as many big league chances, should have no trouble whatever grabbing himself another job on the large time, if he wants it.

Nick Flatley

For Donie is one of the few real managers lingering around the game these days. He knows his business, is a fighting sonofagun, and any time [illegible] he'll manufacture a winner.

The Donie was once pilot picked a tough spot in Pittsburgh. That's a rough riding town, and the club owners do not hesitate to cut in on the managerial end of things. Donie has put up with a lot. He had to keep Cuyler on the bench for a whole season. Which broke his heart.

No manager cares about the troubles his players have with owners. But when stars are benched because they don't get along socially with the powers above, the pilot naturally squawks.

Bush had the Pirates in the money his three managerial years, and before that he did a great job in Washington. There was interference there, too.

Donie has done well for himself. He may buy into the Indianapolis club and run it. They want him in that town. But when you figure it all out, he's needed in the big show.

Seen Hither and Yon

A Few Real Blows, Anyhow

Somebody wants to give the referees whistles, so that a few toots would warn fighters when to break. This might be a good idea. It would open up new fields for the boys who always are trying to beat the ring racket.

The managers can blow—and how—and it wouldn't be long before they would be using the whistle. It would be easy for a smart manager, whose battler had an ear for music, to get a specially toned tooter. He could give it a blow, and his boxer might smack the unsuspecting foe, as he started to break.

If two managers had the same idea at the same time, it might help action and excitement. The scheme would also give traffic cops a chance to become referees, and later on, managers.

It looks like just another of those daffy ideas, so prevalent these days. Seems to us that Damon Runyon's notion of doing away with fouls, and letting the boys go to it, would help the ring business more than anything.

Did You Know?

That Jim Sullivan, automobile expert, used to be a referee and a Harvard student at the same time. And both took courage in those days.

That Steve Mahoney, sports editor, was a fine catcher and managed some great boxers. And made about twenty bucks a month with real champs.

That former Governor Fuller could push a bicycle over the roads faster than he pushes dollars in the bank nowadays. And had more fun doing it.

That Eddie Cunningham, the Brave scr., works out with the team every day, and is only gaining three pounds a week now.

That a taxi driver told us his meter was running fast. An honest man—he came from Malden.

BRAVES PLAY PHILS AGAIN

BOB SMITH, best of the Tribal twirlers, or Cantwell, will probably step on the hill in the second game of the current cellar series between the Phillies and the Braves at Braves Field this afternoon

The Braves dropped below the .400 mark in their initial start of this series with the Phillies when they lost the game to the Shotton crew in the 10th inning

Previous to the loss, the Tribe had an even average of .400, with 36 victories and 72 defeats. The defeat dropped the locals to and average of .397 and encased them securely in the cellar so far as the Phils are concerned.

The Philadelphians are marked at .430 as a result of their victory. That leaves the standing of the clubs, so far as actual position is concerned, unchanged The Phils are in sixth, the Reds in seventh and the Braves in last place.

It was a tough game for the Wigwam players to lose The contest was not decided until the 10th inning The Phils made two runs in their half of the frame to break the 3-to-3 tie.

Whitney, Phil third sacker, singled and Don Hurst smashed out a blow of similar vintage. Tommy Thevenow advanced them with a sacrifice to Lee Bell, Freddie Maguire covering first on the play. Davis walked and then Benge, "the hittin' pitcher" of the visitors, knocked out a single and scored two runs Fresco Thompson wound up the inning by hitting into a double play.

KEENAN OUT OF HOUR RACE

Frankie Keenan, the popular Revere motor-pace follower, is out of bike racing for the remainder of the year Keenan has a fractured jaw, X-ray pictures show, and he would really be endangering his life if he rides in the next few weeks.

Another fall might prove fatal, doctors warned Keenan, so he withdrew from the hour race at the Revere cycle track Saturday night and announced that he would hang up his helmet and store away his bike until next season

A week ago last night Keenan was working out at the Revere oval and was roaring around the track at better than 40 miles an hour. His rear tire blew and Frankie went sprawling, being knocked unconscious. His face was severely burned and has been troubling him since, but he had no idea that he had broken his jaw

English-American Net Battle Today

By JOHN GILLOOLY

AN English-American battle is on the books for this afternoon when Mrs. George W. Wightman and Sarah Palfrey clash with Mrs. Edith Covell and Mrs. Dorothy Shepherd-Barron, British champions, in the finals of the women's doubles at the Longwood Cricket Club.

The final in the veterans' doubles, which will also be settled this afternoon, brings Fred Baggs and Dr William Rosenbaum and Channing Frothingham and Benjamin S. Blake together.

Berkeley Bell and Lewis White, a couple of fighting young men from Austin, Texas and George Lott of Chicago and John Doeg of Santa Monica, California, will fight it out in the Steele Memorial Bowl tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 for the honor of donning the 48th national doubles crown.

Although Lott and Doeg are favored to win, the tennis populace isn't particular. All the finalists are under 23 years of age and this country is rooting for more youth and less experience these days with the blooming Frenchmen clinging tenaciously to the Davis Cup, which is symbolic of world tennis honors

John Gilbooly

YOUTH IN FINALS

It is the first time in the history of the national doubles that such a youthful final bracketing has been brought about. The Longwood officials made a perfectly logical seeding and there's no fault to find. But the upset line certainly wreaked havoc with the draw all the week This year's national doubles will go on record as the most surprising ever

The only redeeming feature of said draw is that Lott and Doeg were seeded in number two position, ahead of William Tilden and Frank Hunter, the team they pushed aside in the semifinal. The seeding of Lott and Doeg ahead of the veterans was unexpected, but it now seems that the officials knew what they were doing.

Tilden will probably sit with morose countenance in some dark corner of the Bowl tomorrow to watch the "battle of youth." It will be a rather sorry day in Bill's life Another million on the road out. He's not all done yet, though, for

Dilboy Post Looks to Record Entry List

More entries have been received to date by the Dilboy Post officials for their next outdoor amateur boxing tournament, bein., held next Wednesday night, at Dilboy Field, Somerville, than were received for any tourney staged this summer.

Considering the large number of boxers who have competed in every show, these early entries indicate that this tourney may surpass in number of bouts, all previous shows.

Classes to be competed are the 112, 126, 135, 147, 175 pounds and heavyweights. Entries for these divisions may be forwarded to Dilboy Post, V. F. W. headquarters, Knights of Columbus building, Highland ave., Somerville, where reservations may also be made.

Today's Matches at Longwood

WOMEN'S DOUBLES
Final

2:00—Mrs. George W. Wightman and Miss Sarah Palfrey vs. Mrs. Edith Covell and Mrs. Shepherd-Barron.

VETERANS' DOUBLES
Final

2:00—Fred Baggs and Dr William Rosenbaum vs. Benjamin S. Blake and Dr. Channing Frothingham.

3:30—Semifinal round father and son doubles.

4:30—Third round and semifinal mixed doubles.

VETERAN PAIR OUT

Hunter and Tilden won the national doubles in 1926 and 1927 Bill couldn't enter last year because he dipped his fountain pen in the ink once too often to suit the U. S. L. T. A. So Hunter, a real pal, also stayed out while Lott and John Hennessey, of Indianapolis, won the 1928 bo: s.

It is one of the few times in Bill's tennis career that he hasn't had some part or other to play in the finals of a tournament in which he has entered But he still has a chance to get some of the glory with Molls Mallory in the mixed doubles, the semifinals of which are played today and the finals tomorrow.

Tomorrow's final is going to be one of the best on record if both teams can stand up under the week's strain and play as they have been They have a day of rest today so it seems reasonable that they'll both be fit for the title chase

CUDAHY WINS SEARS CUP

For the first time in the history of the national junior sailing championships, the defending title holder retained his championship when William B. Cudahy sailed to victory in the deciding race of the 1929 Sears Bowl competition.

Young Cudahy, who is 17 years old, won the championships when sailing for the Beverly Yacht Club of Marion and his crew representing the Bar Harbor Yacht Club took the honors.

This crew from the Maine coastal district, which consists of Capt. Cudahy, his brother, Michael Cudahy, age 15, and Townsend Munson, age 17, has in addition, the honor of removing the Sears cup from Massachusetts tidal waters for the second time in its nine years of existence

The victorious crew took two races and defeated the Annisquam Yacht Club crew, champions of the North Shore.

Dawson Withdrawn From Amateur Golf

Del Monte, Cal., Aug. 29 (AP)—Formal withdrawal of one of the outstanding contenders for the national amateur golf championship, Johnny Dawson of Chicago, was announced tonight.

Ross of Brooklyn Is Early Swim Leader

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 30 (AP)—Three hundred yards in front of his nearest rival, Clarence A. Ross of Brooklyn, N. Y., was leading the pack at the end of the first two-mile lap of the Wrigley-Canadian national exhibition 15-mile swim today. In second place was Lyle S. Hubbard, Toledo, O., who was 10 yards ahead of Norman Ross, Chicago. Clarence Ross' time for the first lap was 51 minutes, 26 seconds.

Nearing the three-mile mark Clarence Ross was stroking 58 to the minute and was literally streaking through the water as his powerful arms, coated in white grease which made him easily distinguishable, rose and fell swiftly and rhythmicall. He was holding on to his 300-yard advantage over Hubbard, Norman Ross and Summers.

In fourth position at the end of the first lap was Byron Summers of San Francisco, with others following in this order:

Young moved into eighth position, displacing Vierkoetter, as they started the second lap

The two women swimmers occupied 19th and 20th places, Mrs. Evelyn Armstrong of Detroit being a few yards ahead of Ruth C. Tower of Toronto.

Holy-in-One

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 30—The Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman of Washington, D. C., made a hole in one when driving from the ninth tee on the links of the Blink Bonnie Golf Club at Sorrento. The hole is 90 yards in length.

Hard Week-End for St. Mark's Nine

Tomorrow they battle the champs of the South Shore in the Kingston Town team at their field in a game the whole Cape is looking forward to.

Sunday the Maroon and Gray team play St. Anne's of Readville at Wainwright Field, Dorchester and on Monday, Labor Day, the Saints will play their traditional rivals, the Dorchester A. A., winners of the Dorchester Twi League, and who have as yet to gain a victory over the Maroon and Gray team in their three years of battling.

Rawson Thrills Fans as He Stops Mills in Fourth

HERE'S HOW SARAH PALFREY HOPES TO STROKE WAY TO HELEN WILLS' TENNIS THRONE

Big Boy Rawson K O's Mills in 4th Round

By JACK CONWAY

BIG BOY RAWSON'S mighty right-hand punch thundered once more when he battled Bob Mills at an Arena club show at Fenway Park. When it crashed to its mark it flashed forth with the destruction of a bolt of lightning.

Once in the third round and three times in the fourth frame did Rawson's splitting sock send the New Hampshire champion crashing to the canvas.

Mills was counted out by Referee Johnny Brassill as he struggled to his feet after the third knockdown in the fourth session. He was punch drunk at the time and fell backwards into a neutral corner.

Jack Conway

Big Boy had proved once more he can sock. He is still unsteady and at times gets very tired, but there is a flare and a flash in his punch which spells ruin for anybody it strikes.

Rawson was in bad shape himself earlier in the contest. A second before the gong sounded for the end of the second round, Mills cut loose with a savage left hook. It landed flush on "Big Boy's chin and knocked him off his feet. Rawson crashed into his own corner and sat down on the first of the ring ropes. The bell then came to his rescue.

IT was a heavyweight drama filled with thrills. It lacked the acience of more finished performers, but the crowd was satisfied. It witnessed a punching duel which terminated in a dramatic knockout.

The speculative element once more chuckled. On form, Mills should have been a favorite as he knocked Rawson out at the Arena. But the boys who make the odds installed Rawson a choice. They love a puncher and figured that Big Boy could turn the tide of battle in his favor with a single wallop. And he didn't disappoint his backers.

Al Lacey sent Rawson out at a fast pace in the opening round. Big Boy used his left hand to good effect and during a mixup at close quarters roughed Mills part way through the ropes. Rawson walked right in and smacked Mills before he could regain his balance. This wasn't perfect ring etiquette, but Big Boy was brought up in the rough and tumble school of life.

RAWSON recuperated quickly and was in good condition when he came out for the third round. He shifted his attack to the body. He let everything he had go with his punches. He buried his right mitt deep in Mills' mid-section. Bob slowed down and left himself wide open to Big Boy's thundering right which crashed to its mark just before the bell. They dragged Mills to his corner.

Lacey sent Big Boy roaring from his corner at the opening of the fourth frame. He was all over Mills and soon plastered him with a right to the chin. Bob was up at the count of nine, but another right sent him down for a nine count.

Once more the New Hampshire warrior got up only to be tipped over again by another right. Mills was counted out as he was struggling to his feet.

Codman A. A. Meets Two Strong Rivals

The Codman A. A. of the Dorchester Twilight League will play the Village A. C. tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at Wainwright Field and the St. Ambrose B. B. C., another league aggregation, on Sunday afternoon at the Town Field, Dorchester.

"Bussy" Allen, shortstop of the Codman A. A., will be given a tryout by President Bob Quinn of the Red Sox at Fenway Park next week.

The Dorchester A. A., league leaders in Dorchester, will play the Codmans next week with the winning team assured of the lead in the Twi League of that section.

Miss Cooper Wins Maine Net Crown

York, Me., Aug. 30—Miss Eleanora Cooper of Baltimore won the final in the women's singles of the annual Southern Maine tennis tournament at the York Country Club, defeating Mrs. M. Ross of Philadelphia in straight sets, 6—4, 6—4.

Miss Cooper already had two legs on the trophy and by virtue of her victory, obtains permanent possession of the cup.

FLOWERS HERE TOMORROW

Bruce Flowers of New Rochelle, N. Y., will arrive in the Hub tomorrow, confident that the miracle winning streak of Jake Zeramby, 19-year-old Lynn boy, will be crushed when they clash at Braves Field, next Tuesday night.

Flowers' recent record in the ring indicates that Zeramby will face the most formidable opponent of his career.

If Zeramby can stand up under the punches of this hard hitter, it will be almost certain that he can hold his own with any lightweight in the world. But this is Zeramby's first invasion of lightweight ranks and it is apparent that he is treading on dangerous soil.

Flowers will finish his training here. Garden officials gave him permission to remain in New York to witness the Kid Chocolate-Al Singer bout. He has not fought since he met Miller and will be in better form than ever before.

With Hy Diamond, West End, and Frankie Moore, North End, meeting in the two-round semifinal, this looks like another thrilling session.

Williams Football to Start Sept. 10

Williamstown, Aug. 30—Announcement was made here that football practice at Williams College will start on September 10.

Chocolate Winner in Thrilling Fight

NEW YORK, Aug. 30—Kid Chocolate, sensational Cuban boxer, scored a thrilling victory over Al Singer of the Bronx in a 12-round battle at the Polo Grounds.

A crowd of 50,000 which paid about $225,000 to see the bout, cheered Chocolate as he left the ring after defeating the conqueror of Featherweight Champion Andre Routis a few weeks ago.

Conceding his opponent almost four pounds, Chocolate proved the stronger and more durable and had Singer weakened from terrific punches to the head at the final bell. Singer weighed 128¾, Chocolate 125.

Chocolate allowed Singer to get away to a long lead in the early rounds, but he fought gamely and steadily from behind to wipe out Singer's margin.

Singer weakened during the last part of the fight, winning only one round after the sixth. He took the 11th, a tame session, but was barely able to weather the final round.

Standing toe to toe, they traded punches in the 12th. Chocolate repeatedly staggered Singer with short lightning lefts and rights to the head.

Singer rallied during the middle of the final session and had the Cuban in bad shape on one occasion, but the Kid covered quickly and was outpunching Al at the final gong.

After the final round, easily the best of the fight, Chocolate jumped across the ring and lifted Singer up, to show his strength. Singer was near exhaustion and had a cut under his right eye, and a bit of swelling around that region.

Singer, who entered the ring at 7 to 5 favorite, announced after the battle that he had no alibis.

"I tried hard every second," he said. "The Kid is smart. My cut eye was a bit of a nuisance, but it didn't stop me from doing my best."

ROWING NO. 8

Harvard Crew Wins Long Race

THE longest race in which ever a college crew participated was won by Harvard, July 15, 1858, on the Charles river, in a six-oared boat manned by the following: Bow, Alexander Agassiz; No. 5, J. H. Ellison; No. 4, J. H. Wales; No. 3, Charles W. Eliot; No. 2, C. Crowninshield, and stroke, B. W. Crowninshield (captain). All were undergraduates except the captain, who was graduated the previous June, and Eliot, who was a member of the class of '53. At that time Eliot, who was later to become president of Harvard, was a tutor in mathematics.

The race was for a distance of six miles, with three turns. Eight crews, Harvard, Fort Hill Boy, Lexington, Stirling, Shamrock, Exile, James Buchanan and Kate Keen took part. The times of the first four crews were, in order: 40m., 25s.; 41m., 44s.; 42m., 30s.; 43m., 24s. The times of the remaining contestants was not taken.

From 1809 through 1875, the standard college racing boat was six-oared, without coxswain and steered by a yoke operated by the bow oarsman's foot. In 1878 Harvard and Yale adopted the eight-oared shell, steered by a coxswain. This was six years after the sliding seat had come into use.

In 1857 the first training table was adopted at Harvard. Previously there had been no real training. The men used to row together once in a while and might hold a trial brush or two against some rival crew. But that was all. B. W. Crowninshield thus records the first training table in his diary:

June 10, 1857, we went to Mrs. Holkins to a training table in Appian Way. The food there was excellent.

By degrees the rowing candidates began to take up training between races and in the off season. The work was very irregular at first and was chiefly confined to sailing and running, when weather permitted. There was some work done in a private gymnasium, also. In 1859 the first college gym was opened at Harvard, and five years later rowing weights were installed. Then the training began to take on semblance to the modern regime. But some years were to pass before rowing machines came into existence.

RACES MONDAY ON CHARLES

Final plans for the Labor Day regatta on the Charles under the auspices of the New England Amateur Rowing Association were completed at a meeting of officials at the Union Boat Club.

The order of events was announced along with the drawing of lanes while plans were also brought forward in regard to a regatta on Columbus Day.

The Labor Day regatta starts at 9 30 and Jr. George H. Magrath will referee. Charles Burtram and Philip Fox are the timers, Leonard MacNeill judge at the finish, and Thomas Healy clerk of course.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

"Don't beginners ever use irons" one member of the class has written me. "I've been waiting a long time for some instructions on irons in these lessons." Well, sonny, you haven't been feeling me any. I know you've been using your irons. Also I know you have been using, or trying to use, the principles I have mentioned with the wood clubs in your iron club play. So I have let you and all the others go right ahead, giving you, mean time, playing principles which, applied as they have been to wood clubs, apply equally to the irons. You use exactly the same swing principles with irons, the swing never changing in form and style. It changes mechanically and the grip changes slightly—not in form, however. These details will be given in articles to follow. But meantime get this thought thoroughly implanted in your mind. The best golf rule, one to adopt and make your own right now, is simplicity of swing. That is, develop this one swing and always use it. Do not make the mistake of complicating the thing by trying to use one swing with one club, another with other clubs. The game is difficult enough without that.

Salem Ties Roslindale for Lead in Twilight League

WITCH CITY NINE NOW HAS EDGE

By DICK McSWEENEY

A PLAYOFF between Roslindale and Salem looms for second half honors in the Twilight League. Both teams are tied for first place as a result of games last night.

While the strong Quincy team, now in third place, was holding Roslindale to a 3 to 3 tie, Salem defeated South Boston, 6 to 0, putting the Witch City in a tie for the top.

Salem seems to have a slight edge just now playing Taunton tonight, while Roslindale plays Dorchester. Salem ought to defeat Taunton, while it is by no means certain that Roslindale will have an easy time with Dorchester.

Fred Loftus of Concord, pitching for Salem, hurled the first no-hit no-run game of Greater Boston Twilight League history.

Loftus passed two men, but was otherwise airtight. Perfect support aided him.

The nip and tuck race between Roslindale and Salem for second half laurels has caught the interest of those fans who follow the afternoon sport.

Roslindale followers are of the opinion that their club will crush Quincy if the two outfits meet in the playoff series for the championship. They point out that Roslindale has a great array of heavy hitters in Andy Spognardi, Fred Duncan, Frank Powers, Moon and Dan Shannon. But first, Roslindale must beat out Salem.

In tonight's game with Dorchester, Manager Mellen of Roslindale will start Bill Rose on the hill. Dorchester's reliable hurler, Frank McDonald, will serve them platter-ward for the locals.

Lou Pega will twirl for Salem tonight when that team goes to Taunton. Pega has been pitching remarkable ball for the Witch City outfit and will be favored to send Taunton's batsmen down in correct order.

The home team will use Lou Strecker with versatile Manager Al Wrigley playing the role of backstop.

Turner and Gourley will be the opposing pitchers in the Malden-Reading game tonight. Turner turned in a capable relief job against Braves the other evening. Gourley is one of Reading's best spare propellers.

LYNN SEEMS NOW OUT OF FLAG RACE

By CHARLES HOFFMAN

LYNN'S chances of winning the second half took quite a drop when the Shoe City team lost a double-header to the Portland Mariners in the New England League, while Manchester was trouncing New Bedford. This double defeat looks as if Lynn is out of the race.

Cronin, Lynn pitcher, started his second game for the Lynnites although his team got more hits than the winners he was again unsuccessful.

Bob Smith, ex Boston College catcher caught the two games for the Portland team. Smith was signed up by Lynn, but went to the Portland club under option. This was a lucky break for the Mariners, as Charlie Schriver, recently acquired from Manchester, split a finger and will be out for the rest of the season.

McHugh, who banged out a homer, winning the game, along with two other singles and Sid Graves provided the batting features of the second contest. Graves made five hits out of six times at bat in the second game.

The first game was a pitchers' battle but the second game saw the Mariners score the largest number of runs on the Lynn club this season, also making 22 hits.

Sam Post, enlongated first baseman, and Joe Hunzig, shortstop attempted to pull the second game out of the fire by stepping to the mound, but to no avail.

Under the leadership of Duke Stafin, who was appointed manager when Win Clark was called home to the bedside of his wife, Manchester trounced the New Bedford club 11 to 1.

Bowman, Manchester third sacker, had a perfect day with the willow, banging out three hits in three trips to the plate.

Salter, big righthander who was with Lynn and Portland in the New England League last season, was signed up by the Gloucester Wanderers, and pitched his first game for the latter club. He gave out seven passes, which was the cause of his defeat.

Nashua and Lewiston divided a doubleheader, in two of the stormiest games of the season. The two umpires, Tanney White and Joe Casey, arrived late at the park, and Manager Burkett claimed that both of the arbiters were not fit to umpire the ball game.

Players had already been picked to umpire, and owner Hunnewell had given orders to the points not to let the two regular umpires work. But the umpires took immediate charge of the game, which was stopped many times when decisions were protested by both clubs.

Nashua took the opening game when they banged out 15 hits which accounted for seven runs, while the Twins were only able to get one scratch. The second game was a pitchers' battle, in six innings, Chuck Wolfe having a little better of the argument with Kropps, winning 2 to 1.

AUNT BELLA'S DAILY HOME BEAUTIFUL CHAT

TODAY, kind friends, I would speak a word on how to make the home attractive with a hammer and saw. Any resourceful wife can, in a few minutes, make over her own furniture. Home is what we make it. Women who are continually running out to play bridge or what-not are likely to find that they are not "in the swim" so far as Aunt Bella's radio talks are concerned. Therefore, let one and all pay strict attention, and tomorrow I hope to show how to make an attractive chair out of a barrel. And until then, as we say abroad, "Au revidershum." I thank you.

RECORD LIST EXPECTED AT QUINCY

THE entries for the N. E. A. A. A. U. track and field championships that are being held at Pfaffman's oval, Merrymount Park, Quincy, under the auspices of the city of Quincy, are now coming in very fast.

Manger Frank F. Bruce, who is receiving the entries for A. T. Hart, the chairman of the track and field committee, intimates that there will be a record list of athletes to report to the clerk of course, Benjamin Bradley Osthues, on Sunday, September the 8th.

Entries were received from "Peerless Jimmie" Henigan and Ralph Stevens of the Dorchester Club, for the six miles run. "Jimmie" hasn't competed in the New Englands for some time and would like very much to win.

He is getting a little older every year and this might be his last try at winning a N. E. A. A. A. U. gold medal.

Frank B. Newton, Jr., living in Quincy, a former Milton and Worcester Academy and Brown University track and field star, has entered in the sprints and discus throw.

Other entries follow:

Francis Ramsbotham, New Bedford, sprints; Donald Pfeer, of Gloucester, 440; George Lesuelo, of the Kanto Club, Maynard, hammer and discus throws; Fred Babbitt, of Medford, pole vault; F. Victor Nilsen, of Harvard, sprints; Henry "Mike" Gibbons, Axel Nielson of Quincy, in the jumps.

Track manager E. W. Hansen of the S. U. Club of Boston has sent in the full strenght of his club's athletes, headed by Ralph Colson, former Penn. University track star.

Athletic director William C. Hultgren of the Boston Y. M. C. A. also has his full team of athletes ready to give the B. A. A. and other clubs a battle for the point trophy.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

TOMMIE QUINN, Chestnut Hill, and Stanley Neptune, Sc Shore, are all primed or their 18-hole exhibition match on the South Shore Country Club. This match, which will played Sunday afternoon, is the first ever staged between two caddies, and will attract a large gallery, which will be amply rewarded for its trouble.

Tommie Quinn, who recently celebrated his 14th birthday, but who could pass for 12, is playing the South Shore course today. He went down to the West Hingham club yesterday and caddied for Steve Hopkins and being a very observant youngster, he has a fine knowledge of the course.

Stanley Neptune has been under the watchful eye of Clarence Gilroy, the South Shore professional, all week, readying himself for his match with the Brookline youngster.

Since President James H. Kimball announced that the South Shore Country Club was to stage a match between two caddies, the innovation has been the talk of all country clubs. There will be hundreds of Greater Boston golfers at South Shore Sunday afternoon, for President Kimball has sent out a hundred invitation to the public to attend this match.

Bobby Goodale of Winchester was rough on junior champions and runnerup for honors in juvenile classics. Not only did Goodale dispose of Bill Donnelly, the present titleholder, and Joe Lynch, a former champion, while on his way to the Woodland three-day tournament, but he won his right to the semifinals by defeating Bunny Emerson, who played Donnelly at Brae Burn and Francis Hersey, who fell before Jimmy Conroy three years ago at Woodland.

Herman Goldberger, who was the sensation of the junior championship at Brae Burn for three rounds, came into his own at Woodland when he won the second flight. Goldberger will be heard from within a few years, as he has all necessary requisites to gain fame in golf.

Although some of the finest tournaments ever held in this section have been played at Woodland, this year's three-day medal and match play event eclipsed all previous affairs. There was a qualifying round, which set up a field of 212 starters during the new mark, and during match play not a single really fine caliber of golf was played.

There is a large field playing at Sandy Burr and Maynard today in the annual open medal play tournaments being staged by these clubs. Before tomorrow night, it is very likely that more than 500 golfers will have played at both of these courses.

John P. Feeney has returned from his sojourn at Lake Sunapee, N. H., where he claims he saw a record established in a four ball match. Accompanying Feeney, one of Massachusetts' low handicap players, went around the Sunapee course without one being on the fairway and all the help he extended his partner was the halving of one hole. Feeney is of the opinion that this player would have strengthened his combination, if he had missed connections with the Newport train at Concord, N. H. For the identity of the record maker write John P. Feeney, Wollaston or Woodland golf clubs.

Golfers seeking an enjoyable course to play over the holiday should take a trip up to Tow Town Tavern in Winchendon. The Toy Town Tavern course is a sporty nine hole layout, which offers as fine a test of golf as can be had in New England.

After next week, Bill Donnelly, the junior champion will hang up his clubs, as far as tournament play is concerned for the season. Bill is playing with Jim Healy at Sandy Burr Tomorrow and will team up with Joe Fay, Rockport next week at Tedesco after which he will be finis for 1929, his banner year.

TINSLEY WINS PRAISE FOR ABLE WORK

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

A bear many favorable comments on the work of John F. Tinsley as president of the Boston Chamber of Crompton & Knowles Loom Works, as chairman of New England Council committee on community development. These are given weight emphasis by the sale of the Everett Mills plant at Lawrence to a syndicate, and the plans for future operations

* * *

Mr. Tinsley may well say that "of ner nomic significance to industry throughout the country is this grouping in one manufacturing property of several related in his tries. It is highly indicative of salability of New England's economic assets, manufacturing conditions and economic future.

More than $5,000,000 is invested in auto camps in Maine alone. Owners would be interested in the movement started by Mrs. Wenona Osborne Pinkham, secretary of the Massachusetts Civic League to require guests to register at such camps. In some of Maine's "cabin" this requirement is already in force. A few of the owners go even further than requiring mere registration. The automobile owner is required to affix the registration number of his car beside his name.

State Street rumor runs to the effect that one of the big motor chiefs has been hard hit going "short" of Auburn, and yesterday's spectacular rise might seem to offer partial confirmation of the yarn. However, it appears very unlikely that the motor leader would have picked this particular stock, with notably strong backing, for a "short" sale to any great extent.

General industrial activity is certainly at a level remarkable for this season of the year. Business is at least to some degree justifying the stock market barometer.

No recent comment has been made regarding he Federal Reserve Board's 6 per cent money "thunderbolt" which some expected he "break the market." The market has sailed gaily upward in the face of the 6 per cent rate. The imposition of the stiff rate was really intended to shatter the market. It's beauty seems to have unquestionably scored another failure.

When Vice-President Gerrit Fort of the Boston & Maine resigned that post to become president of the Raymond & Whitcomb Co., the "sightseeing" industry was right on the verge of tremendous growth. I told New England why this great and managed institution is not only the largest individual factor in the "land cruise business" today but also the largest ocean cruise operator in the world. Americans spend over $75,000,00 a year on ocean cruises.

The 1929 season has been the best yet for Raymond & Whitcomb. Its gross business being estimated at close to $14,000,000. More than 65,000 persons have either been carried on the company's tours or have booked accommodations through its offices. This means an average expenditure per person of approximately $666. Accommodations run as high as $32,000- and strangely enough, it is the better and more expensive excursions that are taken first.

The ocean cruise business developed immediately upon close of the war. Now Raymond & Whitcomb carries annually about 4000 persons on such cruises, or about 400 per vessel. This New England company led the world in number and importance of its sea cruises and now has under charter four voyages in 1930, which will lower the seven seas, five large ships which will make 10 special cruises during the year. These include one round-the-world trip on the new North German Lloyd ship Columbus. With respect to cruises by the Columbus, the company booked more than $1,000,000 of business for this ship, before the journey was even advertised Charter for this ship cost over $1,000,000.

Column by B. C. Forbes, business expert, will be resumed in the Boston Evening American's Financial Section upon his return from vacation.

New York Magnet for Gold From All Parts of World

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Aug. 30—The superior profit-making capacity of American corporations is one of the significant factors that makes New York act as magnet for gold from all parts of the world.

The popularity of American stocks abroad, causing a flow of funds westward across the Atlantic, causes embarrassment to European central banks and is one of the reasons for the frequent conferences between Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, and American bankers. In the phrase of one observer, Wall Street has become a colossal suction-pump, which is draining the world of capital, and the suction is thereby producing a vacuum in Europe. The immediate effect of this situation is to drain England of gold, and to raise interest rates there, causing foreign borrowers in London to pay extraordinarily high rates.

One outstanding American captain of industry, who believes that this is the golden age of American business, sent me with implied approval a statement by Lord Rothermere, British interpretation of the present American prosperity:

"People in Europe sometimes say grudgingly about the United States," said Lord Rothermere, "that it was the war which made her rich. That statement is only partly true. The war speeded up America's advance in the financial domination of the world. It made her richer and Europe poorer, but even without the war, the gigantic resources and advantages of the United States would in the end have brought about the same results."

Viewing our prosperity through the eyes of a Briton, Lord Rothermere added: "Within her borders are 120,000,000 people, spread over an area as large as Europe, with consuming capacity and standards of living that very less than those of Lancashire differ from those of London. Work and money-making are almost the sole interests of the entire nation. Americans have few hobbies, no leisured class, and rarely retire from business. They own huge country has no tariff barriers, and possesses the most efficient system of transportation and communication that exists. Beneath and upon the enormous and until only partially developed territory of the United States are found very nearly all the raw materials its manufacturing industries. Its businesses are organized in large units, with highly skilled executive control. Cutthroat directors are unknown. The president of any one of a score of American corporations is almost as great a figure as any political president or prime minister in Europe.

"Statistics and salesmanship are the scientific hobbies of the nation. The capitalists are courageous and restlessly energetic; its workers are ambitious and well paid. There are no trade union restrictions and no unemployment dole. The country's seaboards lie on the world's two greatest oceans. Europe, South America and the East are equally accessible as markets for American products. With such supreme advantages nothing could keep the United States from becoming the most powerful nation in the world."

In seeking to explain the fantastic rise in the New York Stock Exchange, Lord Rothermere points out: "This real and rising national prosperity provides a firm foundation for the unprecedented increases of value which have taken place in the securities listed on Wall Street. Those securities are nearly all of the highest class, and subject to close public inspection and control before their quotations are admitted. Yet the upward surge of America's wealth is carrying prices even of these stocks to levels sometimes more than a hundred per cent higher than those of a few years back.

"The enormous savings and surplus profits of America are continually seeking investment in their home market, which under the number of securities remains restricted. Under the high pressure generated by the huge, concentrated flow of money, American stocks are lifted to constantly increasing prices.

"Some European authorities in Europe maintain that the tremendous rise in the values of American stocks is a feverish fever which will soon pass. There are financial authorities in the United States who share with them, but their opinion is somewhat discredited by the fact that they have been saying the same thing for several years, and the fever has not passed yet.

"The expansion now going on in Wall Street is the greatest financial phenomenon of any age. It will have vast and widespread consequences. The absorption of European capital in America is rapidly giving to the United States the financial empire of the world. The great European banks with the exception of the Bank of England and the Bank of France, will tend increasingly to become dependencies of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

"By closer co-operation with the United States, by copying their modern methods and securing their friendly aid, we shall be using the best means to extricate our own older and hardly tried economic organization from its difficulties which so dangerously beset it."

Warns Against Buying on False Tips Via Telephone

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN

NEW YORK, Aug. 30—Long distance telephone "tips" on "good buys" in the stock market are frequently false alarms, the National Better Business Bureau declares in warning inexperienced investors to "look before they leap" in putting their hard-earned money into these "sure thing" ventures.

The bureau has sent out posters to industrial employes all over the country pointing out what they term an expose of a swindling scheme of selling stock. The posters, labeled "phoney business," are being displayed in factories and other places of employment.

According to the Better Business Bureau, the scheme of calling uninformed purchasers on the telephone and selling stock through fraud "is operated in many states to a successful degree." The bureau reports that it finds often that the victim is called by long distance and asked to place an order for stock on the salesman's plea that it is "due for an immediate rise in price." The stock, it will be listed on some exchange at a higher price "or some other fictitious promise without any basis on fact."

The bureau declares that its investigators frequently disclose a close tie-up between the telephone calls and the operators of so-called "tipster" sheets, which attempt to give reliable and impartial information about a variety of high class stocks.

"Investors are cautioned by the bureau to closely scrutinize telephone calls to buy stock and to regard with suspicion unsolicited advice hinges on promises of increased value or large dividends.

In a bulletin to personnel directors of industries where the warning posters are on display, the National Better Business Bureau says:

"Every investor of moderate experience knows that no reliable brokerage house calls strangers on the telephone urging them to buy some security on advice that is to be due for an immediate rise or will be listed soon on some exchange where the trading price will be higher. But this apparently, is not well known by many irresponsible investors of meager experience.

"Market letters are a feature of the service of reputable dealers and the fraudulent operator uses the same device. The letters are sent by swindlers to prospects whose names are acquired in some way. These closely resemble the communications of reliable dealers and report on securities of high quality but invariably advise purchase of some worthless stock which they are really trying to sell. The telephone calls begin going out to selected prospects after they have received the market letter for a while."

The Bureau warns investors that it is time to "Stop, look and listen" when a stranger calls them on the telephone, urging them to buy certain stocks and offering quick, large and immediate profits.

"The salesman may claim 'inside information,' says the Bureau. "Ask in your turn to get 'outside information.' Whom are you dealing with?"

BOSTON TRADE ACTIVE SAYS DUN REVIEW

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Trade Review in this week's issue will say regarding trade conditions in Boston. Activity in most lines of trade continues good and indications point to a favorable start in the fall business.

There has been a steady demand for wool, though some grades have not sold as well as they did last week. The new lightweight openings of the men's wear lines at about $ per cent below last year's prices have created a favorable impression and dealers now are in the mood to make large commitments. Prices are firm today.

Trading in carpet wool has been light at steady prices. Knitting yarns continue active, but the sales of other grades have been light. Prices are steady with a tendency towards firmness.

Although the New England mills do not have to operate heavily stocked with raw cotton, they are not buying in any quantity at present. Inquiries for fall and winter goods is increasing and an improvement is noted in the cotton goods markets.

A considerable volume of orders for cotton yarns has been received during the week, and a firmer trend in prices is reported. Although labor troubles among the shoe workers have been settled in some sections, the unrest has spread to other communities.

Hides are firm, as the local market are more active. Although the tanners, many of them operating at a loss, their business has been more brisk. Prices do not show much sign of increasing. Chemicals are becoming more active, and the demand for dyestuffs and tanning materials is improving. Pig iron sales of the local furnace this week have been about 3500 tons.

Prices are steady. Some large orders of cement have been received, but other building materials are quiet. Building permits in 85 towns and cities of Massachusetts for July were $18,402,700, which exceeded the amount filed last year in July in 17.6 per cent. Metal working plants operated with a shortage of help during July, but there was a surplus of workers in the shoe, jewelry, rubber and textile lines.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

BE careful where you place your toothbrush. Often it is put in a glass with others of the family so that the bristles touch. This surely does not promote cleanliness and infection can spread by contact of one brush with another. No matter how clean the family is, germs lurk everywhere.

A KISS FOR CORINNA -:- By May Christie

Story of a Rich Girl and Poor Girl After the Same Man

CHAPTER 5

"Was she annoyed?" Corinna told herself, with a violent quiet. "She's crazy about Malvey. She's having no stone unturned to get him. She'll go after him tooth and nail."

"She did make rather a fuss about it while we were lunching. You see I couldn't do less, since she expected it, than take her for a hurried bite. When she found I was firm, and a bit annoyed, she did calm down, and, when we had finished, I packed her off in a taxi complete with her package."

"Going to see her again?" queried Corinna. Her lips and tongue were dry and her throat parched.

"Not on your life. What do you mean Corinna?" Why should I see her again? Haven't I the most marvelous girl-friend already?"

And boldly and in view of the Italian waiter, who thought such demonstrations natural and beautiful and who beamed upon them, he reached out and seized Corinna's hand in his own . . .

Corinna Dugan—a lighted eager mess in those great eyes of hers, her pretty mouth all tremulous and wistful, and with Malvey's hand holding her own in a warm grip—leaned as though hypnotized across the table in the little restaurant toward him.

"You mean it, Malvey? You aren't fooling?" With all the girls you know, sometimes I wonder . . . I'm afraid!"

He laughed. He reddened. "With all the girls I know? Silly Corinna! You're the best pal I ever had. The others—if ever there were any, and I've forgotten 'em—never really counted, only just passed the time for me."

Dear Malvey! So good-looking—young—ardent—and so clever! Surely he had every asset, every quality to win the love of any girl? In a great town like this with so many women in it that were ruthless . . . restless . . . predatory . . . no wonder Corinna's feeling for him brought its sharp anxiety!

But she wasn't going to let her thoughts rest on Denise Van Wyck! Live in this magic moment. Take what the gods gave and be happy, even if only for a day.

"You look like a million dollars, Corinna." There was a warm glow on his face and in those eager eyes of his that, for these many months, had haunted her, night and day. Hadn't their dear allurement dragged the heart out of her utterly?

He ordered more chianti with a lordly air. When she remonstrated, he exclaimed, with a boyish insistence: "I haven't seen you for five whole days, Corinna. I worked at the office up till midnight Saturday, and all of Sunday. Why are you so stony-hearted? Haven't I been leading a dog's life all week, so why shouldn't we enjoy ourselves?"

There was no withstanding Malvey in this mood. Besides, she loved him to be masterful. She took another glass, and Signor Panganini's famed "red ink" sent a warm thrill along her nerves . . . or was it Malvey's nearness combined with the lifting of the Van Wyck menace?

They talked on all sorts of topics; but, as is the way with lovers, always reverting to the personal and their own affairs.

He was no egotist. No matter how events were shaping for him down town, no matter what was on his mind, he always found the time to question her about her doings of the day, and was as solicitous if she was tired, and often seemed to sense her mood—the tempo of life—in a very kindly way.

"You spoil me, Malvey," she would remark wistfully, yet comforted. "For a man, you certainly have the most wonderful intuition. It seems as though I can't hide anything from you."

"That's as it should be!" Malvey would fling gayly at her. "Two minds with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one!" Despite the ripple of laughter in his voice, there was an undercurrent of real feeling as he added: "When two people are crazy about each other, sooner or later they do become 'as one'!"

Her heart thrilled. Wasn't it tantamount to telling her that one day they would marry?

He hadn't said so in so many words, of course. He had old-fashioned notions on these points, and Corinna told herself, resolutely, that until he was in a position to do so, he wouldn't put the ring upon her finger, or ask her to be come his wife . . .

Presently the meal ended, they found themselves out on the street. What should they? It was up to Corinna. He was compliant—anything she suggested would suit him.

The movies? Corinna loved the movies, but since the "talkies" had come in—although she did enjoy a speaking picture—there wasn't quite the same romance atmosphere of wordless music, so that she and Malvey—instead of translating the picture in each other by hand pressures and etc.—would have to pay attention to the spoken word.

Would she like to dance? The breath of spring was so enchanting that Corinna couldn't bear to shut it out within some stuffy, garishly-illuminated jazz hall, when she could be out under the young wisp of moon amid the stirrings of this April night.

"Let's take a bus down to Washington square, and roam about the Village."

"Sure thing!" The pair went eastwards towards Fifth Ave.

SKETCHED IN PARIS

Paris Bureau, Boston American

PARIS, Aug. 30—Artists in black and white are impetus to this, the most striking of all color those designers who season after season give renewed combinations.

Much has been written on the beauty of black and white clothes yet the story is far from covered. This alliance is not easy to wear. The combination has to be entirely in proportion, otherwise the effect is loud instead of striking.

The designers here report a growing demand from their American clientele for such outfits, which are extremely effective with the clear coloring of our women.

Sketched for you today are two outfits, each a perfect example of the perfect black and white costume. The proportions are harmonious and the effects strikingly lovely.

The costume at the right was sketched at Deauville. It is a dress of white georgette and black satin, with graceful appliques of black lace leaves. Rarely are three materials combined with such striking effect. The accessories worn are all black. The small felt hat is trimmed with a diamond and onyx pin.

Luxurious and very new is the wonderful ensemble of heavy double white crepe that is shown at the left. The graceful coat has circular flounces at the cuffs and sides, thus giving a perfect balance to the silhouette. The side flounces are accentuated by heavy bands of silver fox.

Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

Please solve this problem for me:

A man who expects his divorce soon is in love with a very refined well-thought-of widow. They know they like one another very much, but as he is a real man, and has so much respect for her, for fear of any reflection on her he has decided to stop calling on her until he gets his divorce.

Tell me what your opinion is. Would it be a reflection on her? Should he continue to call?

I thank you: MRS. M. F.

IN my opinion, the man who has not yet secured his divorce is doing exactly the right thing in waiting until he obtains the divorce before paying attentions to another woman. Visiting her or going about with her while he is still legally married to another woman might reflect on her and himself and cause a great deal of hostile—and deserved—criticism.

WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE bachelor's slogan is "Give me liberty—or give me death!" But the married man's is "Every day is ladies' day to me!"

* * *

A bachelor's idea of relaxation is to spend a few evenings at home—a married man's is to spend a few evenings far, far away from home.

The English language contains nearly half a billion words, and yet the average man can't find three or four of them that fit together effectively when he's trying to tell a woman that he loves her.

A man wouldn't think of hitching a high-strung, nervous, mettlesome race horse to a plough; but he'll nonchalantly marry a high-voltage prima donna or a fluffy dancing doll, and expect to tie her down to a budget and a grocery book and hitch her to the kitchen range.

A wandering husband is like a skidding car; the harder you jam on the brakes the more uncontrollable he gets.

Somewhere in a man's nature there is an odd, perverse streak, which makes him always prefer a little bit of the wrong woman's love to ALL of the right woman's devotion.

The most useful book to give a bride is not a cook book, but a book of philosophy.

Oh, yes; there are always "just as good fish in the sea" as ever were caught, but what comfort is that to a woman, who has used up the last of her bait in landing a matrimonial minnow?

This modern habit of planning how you are going to "can" the girl before you have started trying to win her, must be about as thrilling as starting the dinner by preparing for indigestion, or taking an antidote before you swallow the cocktail.

A man spends five or ten years inventing alibis for staying single—and the rest of his life explaining why he married.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Mrs. Beeckman will be pleased to answer queries from readers on problems of etiquette.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I must give a word of praise for your splendid column, which has been a great help to my friends and to myself.

Will you please help us settle this question? A says the bride gives her bridesmaids a gift. B says she does not. Which is correct? I. M.

THANK you—and I bow most appreciatively. A is correct. It is customary for the bride-to-be to give her attendants a souvenir of the sacred occasion. Indeed, I have never heard of a bride who omitted this charming gesture, even if she gave the simplest of gifts.

It's the spirit of the gift, you know.

I have prepared a pamphlet on just such gifts, listing many from the simplest to the more expensive and "consequential." If you will send me an addressed envelope, I shall be happy to send you or the bride one or as many as you want. I have one, too, of suggestions for the gift that the groom may give to his attendants, for this also is customary.

VICKEY: It is perfectly proper while walking across a dance floor to rest your hand lightly on the gentleman's arm.

Your remark praising the fingernails is all right, provided you knew the girl well enough. You may send the gift now.

Your writing shows character, but most experts would say that it is not done according to the strictest rules. However, the experts also say that after one has been writing for a few years it is impossible to make anything except the most minor changes in handwriting.

TWENTY: What is finer than "Very sincerely yours." This is not too formal.

NOTES IN FALL FOODS

DOES the occasional east wind pep up the family appetite to the extent of demanding a little heartier "provender?" These are the days when all trot out some of my more substantial favorites from which I've selected several for your approval. I'm a firm believer, you know, that it's better to pay the grocer than the doctor, and at this in-between season the human system really does require a little more fuel. Won't you try these and report?

CHICKEN GOULASH EN CASSEROLE

1 chicken.
4 tbsps. of olive oil or butter
2 carrots (new and small)
2 onions, small
3 tbsp. of flour
1 cup of broth
½ cup of tomato puree or ⅓ cup of cream
1 tsp. paprika
½ tsp. of salt

Have the chicken cut as for a fricassee. Brown the pieces in the hot fat, then remove to the casserole. Slice the onions and carrots and brown in the fat in the pan, adding more if needed, remove the vegetables to the casserole, add the flour and seasonings to the pan and stir until the fat is absorbed; add the broth and the puree or cream and stir till boiling, add to the casserole, cover and let cook nearly an hour or until tender. The paprika, which is used in generous measure, is the feature of the dish. Pass at the same time plain boiled rice.

POTATOES VIENNA STYLE

Mash hot, well-cooked-and-drained potatoes, and season liberally with salt and butter. Add a very little cream or rich milk, and beat until light and smooth. Two or three beaten egg yolks may be added, but are not a necessity. The mixture needs to be dry rather than moist. Shape into portions similar to a Vienna roll having pointed ends. Score each three times, to stimulate the roll, brush over with the yolk of an egg beaten and diluted with a little milk, and set into the oven to become very hot, and brown the top. Serve with any dish with which mashed potato is called for.

MERE MAN SPAGHETTI

Chop fine and separately 2 small onions and 2 thin slices of salt pork. Cook these together in a frying pan until nicely browned, then add half a pound of raw beef (top of the round), chopped fine, ½ tsp. of nutmeg, and ¼ tsp. salt. Dissolve ½ c. of tomato paste (found at Italian stores, the same quantity of well-reduced tomato puree may be used) in half a cup of claret wine, and add to the meat mixture. Have ready a scant quarter pound of hot, cooked spaghetti, sprinkled with Parmesan cheese (use from 1 tbsps. to ½ of a cup of cheese according to taste, and over it pour the cooked mixture. Lift the spaghetti with fork and spoon, until the mixture is evenly mixed through it, then serve at once.

LADY CABBAGE WITH CHEESE

Cut a cabbage in quarters and remove the hard center from each piece; boil in 4 minutes, drain, add fresh boiling water and let cook until tender, then set aside to become cold. Chop the cabbage fine. To 2 cups of the cabbage add 3 well-beaten eggs, ¾ cup mild cheese put through food chopper, 1 tsp. salt, ½ tsp. of pepper, 1 tbsp. of melted butter and ¾ cup of rich milk. Mix all together thoroughly, and turn into a buttered baking dish. Let cook in the oven surrounded by water (in a pan turned) until firm in the center. Serve hot from the baking dish.

EGGPLANT AU GRATIN

Peel an eggplant and cut it into half-inch slices. Sprinkle the slices lightly with salt, and set them aside for a time (to draw out moisture), then press them lightly and dry on a cloth. Dredge or roll the slices in flour, then fry—first on one side and then on the other—in a little hot butter. Melt 2 tbsps. of butter. Add 3 tbsps. of flour, ½ tsp. salt and a dash of pepper. Let cook until frothy, then add a cup of white stock and ½ cup of well-reduced tomato puree. Stir until the boiling point is reached, then add about one-third cup of cream. Spread layer of sauce upon a buttered au gratin dish, sprinkle the sauce with grated Parmesan cheese, and upon this dispose a layer of eggplant, add sauce and cheese, then eggplant until all are used. Have the last layer of sauce and cheese. Spread with buttered bread crumbs, 1-3 cup of melted butter and set into the oven to brown the crumbs.

ON TUBERCULOSIS

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M. D., Ph. D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

TUBERCULOSIS is, of course, one of the most widespread diseases. It is also a disease that may attack almost any part of the body, although tuberculosis infection of the lungs is the type the average individual hears most about.

Tuberculosis is caused always by a germ, the tubercle bacillus which was discovered by Dr. Robert Koch in 1882. Up until that time the disease was thought by many to be hereditary. Now it is known that it is transmitted from one person to another and gains entrance into the body either by inhaling it through the nose or mouth or by swallowing it.

Tuberculosis is peculiarly a disease of communication. The germs thrive and multiply on human tissue and die outside the body.

Just as in some into contact with other fellow human beings and especially since there are those who have tuberculosis and are not aware of it because they do not undergo periodic physical examinations, it is more than probable that most of us must breathe in these germs at one time or another. But good health, a resisting body, can and does keep these germs from gaining hold.

Where this the only reason for maintaining sound and vigorous health it would be sufficient, for tuberculosis is a chronic and wasting disease that may kill, or at any rate impair seriously the progress, happiness and economic status of the individual so affected.

It is true that "T. B." as tuberculosis is so often called, is on the decrease but that is due to the fact that people are heeding the warning signs and are obtaining prompt and efficient medical aid in time.

Certainly, billions of tubercle bacilli are being expectorated daily in city streets and dust particles are conveying them to our nostrils. Everyone, therefore, must be careful.

A tuberculosis person owes it to those next to be careless about his nose and mouth secretions. Furthermore, every case of tuberculosis should be reported to the local board of health and the family should be instructed how to take care of the patient as well as of themselves. Negligence in the use of sputum cups which can be burned has started off many cases.

All milk should be pasteurized, or at least certified, especially if we are to protect our children to the greatest possible extent.

Lastly, if a cold hangs on, or if there is loss of weight, night sweats, marked fatigue after slight exertion—all possible symptoms of a beginning tuberculosis—it is far wiser to have a lung examination than to wait and take chances.

Tuberculosis is much easier to acquire than to cure!

"LITTLE CAESAR" — The Thrilling, Vivid STORY OF A RACKETEER — by W. R. BURNETT

Informer Cautions Sam Against Gun-Play

What Has Happened Before

In the backroom of his "Club Palermo," Chicago gangland headquarters, fat and swarthy Sam Vettori, gangster chief, outlines the plan for a holdup of the Casa Alvarado, high-class night club. Tony Passo, Otero the Greek, Joe Massara and Rico, Sam's lieutenant, are each assigned place to carry out. Sam, who does not actively participate, warns Rico there is to be no shooting.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER 3

Vettori was sitting in his little office on the third floor of the building. At the other side of the wall the jazz band was playing, but he paid no attention. The noise of the jazz band was the same to him as the ticking of a clock to an ordinary person. He felt very pleasant and comfortable over his bottle of wine and his plate of spaghetti. Things were right!

He congratulated himself on his subordinates. Each man a specialist. Yes, yes! That was the way to do. None of this hit or miss stuff for Sam Vettori. Rico the best gunman in the game; a swelled head, all right, but he can be handled, and there you are!

Otero so crazy about Rico he "don't know nothing." Follow Rico any place; do anything tells him. And handy with a rod. Well, well. Not bad for a Mexican. As a rule foreigners were not right with Sam Vettori, but in general he had an open mind, and Otero was the goods.

And look at Joe Massara, there was a man for you! A swell who could pass anywhere. One winter in Florida, so they say, Joe passed himself off as a count and hooked a rich widow for plenty. Yes, yes! That was Joe for you. As an inside man you couldn't beat him.

And Tony! He could drive a car sixty miles an hour straight up the Tribune Tower. Only one thing, sometimes Tony was undependable. Used to be a choir boy at St. Dominick's and that stuff. But he had outgrown that, maybe; anyway he was dead scared of Rico and that would shut his mouth.

Vettori leaned back, wiped his mouth with the back of his hand and unbuttoned his vest. Spaghetti and wine, what is better!

The band stopped playing. But Carillo, the bouncer, put his hear in the door.

"Couple of hard guys looking for trouble, boss," he said.

Vettori looked up.

"Yeah? Know them?"

"Never seen them before."

Vettori heaved himself to his feet and walked with Carillo to the swinging doors which separated the back-rooms and kitchen from the club proper. He pushed the door open about a foot and peered in. Carillo pointed.

Vettori laughed and closed the door.

"Some of them dumb boys," he said; "let 'em alone unless they get bad and start something, then bounce 'em."

"O. K., boss," said Carillo.

Waiters passed Vettori in the corridor, sweat dropping from their faces, steam rising from the dishes on the slanted trays. Vettori rubbed his hands.

"Business is good. Well, well! We won't none of us die in the poor house."

'YOU'RE A GOOD GUY, BUT DUMB'

"They'll fill Rico full of lead. He's too cocky," Seal Skin told Ramon.

When he got back to his office he found Scabby, the informer, waiting for him. Scabby was dark and undersized with a heavy, sullen, blotched face. Passing as a police informer, he was in reality a member of the Vettori gang. He played a dangerous game as he informed on other gangs. His life wasn't worth a cent and he was jumpy and quick with a gun.

"Well, well, Giovannia," said Vettori, "what's the news?"

"Some spaghetti for this man here," he said, "and a bottle of wine."

"That's the ticket," said Scabby without smiling; he never smiled; his face was melancholy and lined, and sagged like a hound's. "The boys on?"

"All set," said Vettori. "It looks easy."

Scabby nodded.

"It ought to be. But no gunplay, get that, Sam. The Big Boy'd raise hell if he knew what was up."

Vettori's face hardened.

"I heard that once, Scabby. That's enough. This is too good to pass up."

"All right," said Scabby, "I've had my say. But things ain't what they used to be, Sam. It's getting dangerous. They've even got the Big Boy scared. It's the damn newspapers. They play crime stuff off the boards. Big headlines, see? That's the trouble."

They sat silent. Vettori, absorbed, puffed on his stogie. Finally he said:

"Listen, Scabby, you ain't heard nothing, see? I got to keep these boys on their toes. Especially Joe. Don't spill nothing about the Big Boy."

"Reilly, the dick's, up front," Vettori nodded.

"He's O. K. If he sticks around, send him back in about half an hour."

"Yeah," said Seal Skin.

"How come you ever left Mexico, Ramon?"

Seal Skin gave him a push.

"Wait'll I finish this."

"Sure, sure," said Otero, smiling and patting her on the shoulder.

"Look," said Seal Skin, "you're a good guy, Ramon. But dumb. How come you hang after Rico?"

Otero didn't understand.

"What you say?"

"They'll fill him full of lead. He's too cocky."

Otero shook his head.

"No, they'll never get Rico."

"They get 'em all."

"No," said Otero, "they'll never get Rico. Once I say to him, 'Look, you must be careful.' But he say, 'Not me, they'll never get Rico.'"

Seal Skin opened the window and flung her cigar down into the street. A gust of cold air rushed into the overheated room.

"Listen," she said, "that's bunk. Rico's no different from anybody else. You stick with Rico long enough and you'll have a swell funeral. Why don't you get into the beer racket? That's safe."

"I go with Rico," said Otero. "What do I care? I have no people. Once I had a brother but they shot him."

"The cops?"

"No, the rurales. He was with Villa."

"Who the hell's Villa?"

"Villa was a great man, like Rico."

"Let's go, Ramon."

"Sure, sure," said Otero.

Scabby pocketed the money. The waiter came in bringing the spaghetti and the wine. Carillo put his head in the door.

"Reilly, the dick's, up front," Vettori nodded.

"He's O. K. If he sticks around, send him back in about half an hour."

"Yeah," said Seal Skin.

"No, it never snowed."

Easy — by BEATRICE BURTON — Author of "The HOLLYWOOD GIRL"

Unlike her bold and modern flapper sisters, Jeanne and Alice, Ann-Marie Macy refuses to compromise her high ideals by petting. Ann-Marie has more serious ideas. She saves the money she earns in her father's bookstore to study art. When John Lawler, catch-of-the-town, invites her to the Christmas dance, her happiness is short lived as Alice selfishly requests Ann-Marie to stay home while she attends the party in her place. Alice and Jeanne further infuriate Ann-Marie by pilfering her Christmas bottle of rare perfume. When Florence Lawler brings her visiting cousin, Neal Forsythe, and his friend, Jim Goodwin, to the Macy store, Ann-Marie secretly falls in Love with the fickle Neal. He is the more serious Goodwin, however, who is enamored of Ann-Marie. He leaves the dance to visit her in the bookstore. Ann-Marie belatedly attends the dance at his suggestion. She really wants to see the handsome Neal Forsythe. In the cloak room, she discovers Neal embracing Leota Ingram, notorious town character. She forgives Neal, but later he humiliates her by leaving her outside the clubhouse in a parked car. After the dance, a gay party is held in the Macy Home for which Ann-Marie is requested to make waffles. Later in bed tired and feverish she is roused by the housekeeper's screams. Neal Forsythe has passed out as a result of the drinking party. Late Saturday night, in the store, Ann-Marie hears a mysterious tapping. Howdy, her brother, is in tears and trouble with Leota Ingram. Ann-Marie sets out to see him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 12

"HOWARD asked me to come to see you, Leota," Ann Marie answered in her gentle way. "That's why I'm here."

The soft answer did nothing to turn away Leota's wrath. Angry color came flaming up into her face, and she shook her red-gold head impatiently.

"Look here!" she cried. "Do you think this is the way he ought to treat me?—sending his family around to talk to me instead of coming, himself?—You tell him for me that, if there's anything he wants to get over to me, he can tell it to me. I ain't goin' to listen to no third parties!"

Ann Marie just sat and looked at her with her blue eyes troubled and thoughtful.

"He asked me to marry him—and now he's got cold feet!" the other girl went on in a voice that rang like brass. "But cold feet or not, he's not goin' back on his word 'cause I ain't goin' to let him! I ain't goin' to be no laughing-stock in this town, let me tell you, and don't you forget it!"

Ann Marie gasped . . . She tried to speak but she could think of nothing to say. What was there to say in the face of such determination as this?

"Howard Macy knows that he'll never care about anybody but me," Leota ran on. "There's a lot of things about him an' me that you don't know—that he ain't told you. Why, last winter when I was sick in bed with bronchitis so long, Howdy paid all my doctor bills and my rent here . . . I know he loves me and that's why I ain't never goin' to give him up!"

"He must love her," thought Ann Marie, "if he's ever given her any money."

For she never had heard of Howdy giving anything to anybody before. Instead, he was always taking things from other people.

He was a born "taker."

Ann Marie had lost control of the five-dollar bills she had let him take, during the past few months, for his weekly half-gallon of gin. And she knew that he borrowed small sums from his father and Mrs. Leezy constantly.

"Where does his salary go?" Ann Marie had often asked herself, and now she was finding out where part of it, at least, had gone . . . To this girl, who sat, before her, blooming like a great big beautiful cabbage-rose, in her cheap finery!

"You probably think Howdy makes a lot of money, Leota," she said suddenly, "but he doesn't. The job of assistant cashier sounds like a big job. But it isn't much of a job down in Mr. Lawler's little bank. It's nothing but a clerk's job."

She paused a moment to let that sink in.

Then she went on:

"And the only reason Howdy has that job is because he goes around with Florence Lawler! If he breaks with her he'll lose his place at the bank—and his whole future will be gone, glimmering!"

Leota's big shining eyes narrowed and she gave a nasty little laugh.

"And what about me and my future?" she asked. "That doesn't count, I suppose. . . It doesn't make no difference what happens to me, does it?"

She caught her breath angrily, and then answered her own question.

"Well, maybe it doesn't make no difference to you," she all but yelled, "but it does make a difference to ME—and Howard Macy's going to make good his promise to marry me, or I'll know the reason WHY! Get me?"

"Now you get out of here!" she finished breathlessly. "And you can tell him everything I said!—SEE?"

Ann Marie saw . . . She saw clearly that she was no match for Leota.

"I ought to find out if she wants money," she thought as she stood u, to go.

But she was afraid to even mention the word "money" to Leota, who stood looking at her with fire in her eye.

"I don't know how Howdy will ever support a wife," she said weakly, turning at the door, "because he really has very little money."

Leota sneered. "He'll have less than he has now when I get through with him!" she answered. "Because if he gets funny with me, I'm going straight to the Lawlers with my story about him! And believe me, sister, it's SOME story!"

Sunday dinner was ready when Ann Marie got home.

Mrs. Leezy was ringing the bell when Ann Marie walked into the front hall, and Howdy was coming down the stairs, two steps at a time.

He was fresh from a bath and a shave. His black hair had been "slicked" down with water and pomade, and he was wearing a Persian silk dressing-gown that Florence Lawler had given him for a Christmas present.

"Hello!" He greeted Ann Marie with cheerfulness. There was nothing about him now of the frightened Howdy who had come down to the book store the night before. Trouble always seems blacker and more terrifying at night than it does in the sunshine, somehow or other.

But at the sight of her face, as she waited for him at the foot of the stairs, he became grave-eyed and solemn once more.

"Been to see her?" he asked, and Ann Marie nodded.

"Well, what did she have to say?" he asked then.

It didn't take long for Ann Marie to tell him.

"She says that if you don't marry her she'll go to Florence Lawler and to Mr. Lawler—and you'll lose your job," she said, "I'm just sick about it!"

"Oh, I guess she won't do that," he made up his mind. "She's just pulling a lot o' hooey on you. Suppose I did ask her to stop with me? I was just kidding her. She can't hold me to a thing like that . . . I'll go down and see her after a while. I'll fix it up."

He went in to dinner and ate his big helpings of chicken pie and peas and mashed potato as if he hadn't a worry in the world.

Then after four that afternoon, when the family was takin' its regular Sunday afternoon nap, Florence and Johnny Lawler came driving up Pleasant st. and stopped in front of the house with a great screeching of brakes and honking of the horn.

"What you all doing?" Florence shouted to Ann Marie who ran out to the porch to see what they wanted.

"Dating" Ann Marie answered with a laugh, and trying to blink the sleep out of her eyes.

"We want you to come up to our house," Johnny called. "The folks have driven over to Mercersburg—"

"We'll come back and pick you up in 10 or 15 minutes!" Florence interrupted him "We're going down to the delicatessen for some oranges."

They drove away, knowing that their invitation would be accepted. None of the young folks in town ever turned down an invitation to a Sunday evening supper party at the Lawlers' house.

They were gay rough-and-tumble affairs, and they had become a sort of weekly institution among the young crowd to which the four young Macys belonged.

"You'd better run down and see Leota—or at least call her up—Ann Marie said quietly to Howdy when she went back into the house. "I know she's going to make trouble for you."

He shook his head. "Aw, rats! Don't let her get your goat, Ann Marie," he replied half-angrily. "Suppose she did go to Florence and her dad and told them a lot of bunk? You believe Leota Ingram on her oath? Who'd even listen to her?"

He went upstairs to dress and Ann Marie followed him.

She finished a little when Ann Marie came in.

"I—I was just going to borrow a pair of your stockings," she explained. "All of mine need darning."

"I have only one decent pair myself," said Ann Marie, "and I'm going to wear them.

Jeanie drooped pathetically. "Gosh, it's misery not to have any money isn't it?" she sighed. "They always want me to do my tap dance and—Oh, dear me, how will I do it tonight in these socks!"

She stood up and held out one slender ankle for inspection. There was a wide "Jacob's ladder" that went from the knee right straight down to the toe of her stocking.

"I'll just have to stay at home, that's all!" she wailed. "I'm not going to go up there, and have everybody looking at my stockings and pitying me because they're all darns and runs.

She started out of the bedroom but Ann Marie stopped her.

"Here," she said, "you can have these to wear!"

She took out her one new pair of silk stockings, all rolled neatly into a ball, and threw them to Jeanie.

"Oh-ooks, terribly!" Jeanie was all smiles instantly. "That pair you have on really looks fine, Ann Marie—and I'll take good care of these, darling. Thank you SO much!"

Jeanie and Alice were still dressing when the Lawlers came back to the house.

"Come in and sit down!" Howdy called to them from the front door. "The girls are still painting on their faces!"

"No, thanks, I'll wait here," Johnny answered.

But Florence got out of the car and came into the house. She always did what Howdy told her to do. She adored him.

Her adoration of him shone in her pink, plump face as she smiled at him.

"How's my Lotsa Mamma?" Howdy asked her with a laugh. He was always joking with her about her plumpness and she did not seem to mind.

Ann Marie left them alone in the parlor, and as she turned away she saw Howdy's arms go around Florence's big ample figure. . . . She knew from the sudden silence that he was kissing her.

And thinking of Leota Ingram, she found herself marvelling at the double-dealing of men with their women.

"Howdy's just as bad as Neal Forsythe," she thought. "Worse, because he's half engaged to Florence, and so deep with Leota that she's going to try to make him marry her!"

The front door-bell rang. Turning, Ann Marie looked through the glass panel of the door. . . . Outside, on the front porch, respendent in a purple sweater suit and pink felt hat, stood Leota herself!

That Girl Next Door -:- Short Story by H. Louis Raybold

MRS. KIRK HOWLAND was an excellent club woman. There were those—Charley Whitlock's wife for instance, who lived two doors away—who said she was a better clubwoman than housekeeper, but Kirk seemed satisfied and that was really all that mattered.

When Mrs. Howland, who had been born Caroline Burgess, found that the Clovertown Scribblers' Society was being formed she immediately had her name put on the waiting list and in due time was elected to membership, made chairman of the nominating committee and told that she would be expected to write and read an original short story at the June meeting.

In November, June can seem a long way off, but once May had arrived Caroline knew the day of her sacrifice on the altar of literary aspirations was not far behind. She didn't feel especially interested in writing a short story (much less reading it), but a duty is a duty and Caroline was no shirker.

Three days before the meeting, she got out a manila pad, three sharpened pencils and an eraser.

In the course of an hour, she managed to jot down several useless titles, a dazzling name for the hero, and a description of the gown worn by the heroine on the evening she was proposed to. But there she stuck and no amount of concentration, resharpening of pencils or running back and forth to the dictionary extricated her.

She was still sitting at her desk puffing her curly head of hair with slender fingers when Kirk came home, very hungry, very talkative and not in the least excited over her failure to write a story.

"Keep right at it," he advised cheerfully "and don't worry about getting me anything to eat. Think what it means to me to have my wife—my wife, mind you—reading an original short story at the Whatsit Club. Much, much more than finding my dinner ready when I come home. I'll just forage in the ice box for some nice cold string beans."

Caroline regarded him suspiciously. She was never quite sure whether Kirk was joking or not. If he was really sarcastic, she was just in the mood to resent it.

"I daresay," she said, "you would like to change places with Charley Whitlock and get Lida for a housekeeper."

"No change places with Charley? No, indeedy. Not me. Never. But don't let me interrupt your literary labors, darling."

"Are there?" broke in Caroline. "What makes you think so?"

"Well, consider this," said Kirk speculatively. "You'll admit there will be published in the next fifty years a hundred magazines, newspapers, and whatnot, containing, we'll say, an average of five stories each. There's 25,000 stories that aren't even sold yet. All you have to do is to think of just one of them!"

Caroline turned the tables. "It it's so easy," she cried triumphantly, "suppose you come to my rescue and think of one for me!"

Kirk took her up. "Very well, I will." Sitting down in his favorite chair, he lighted a cigarette and sat for a moment gazing through a whirl of smoke at the ceiling while Caroline rose and got together a meal that proved surprisingly good considering the short time it took her.

"I have it!" cried Kirk suddenly. "You'll have to end it yourself. I merely furnish the complication. It seems there was a man who married a woman who was all to the good except for a few minor faults, some of which were really virtues, perhaps, if not carried to excess. They were very happy until there returned from college the girl next door who had never meant anything to him until he found her grown into a charming young woman. He falls in love—there you are, Caroline, all set for your story!"

Caroline thanked him with a strange expression on her face and that night, long after Kirk had fallen asleep, she lay staring into the darkness and listening to Patty Wayne next door, recently home from Vassar, playing bits of Chopin on the piano.

Was Kirk in love with Patty? was it some personal feeling which had inspired his story? Was he perhaps astutely trying to prepare her for a fuller confession later on?

Strange that such a catastrophe should have occurred. Strange that she had never given any sinister interpretation to Patty's gay banter with Kirk, to their frequent games of tennis, to Kirk's tearing over after Patty to make up a fourth at bridge.

Somewhere she must have been at fault. Perhaps if she had made a cult and fetish of housekeeping like Lida.

She rose next morning resolved to think things through before saying a word to Kirk. She let him kiss her good-by and stood watching him from the window as he got into the car.

Suddenly she put her hand to her throat. Patty, with traveling bag at her side, was running down the path and waving to Kirk who drew up for her to get in.

She did not believe for a moment that they were running away together. That was too absurd. Yet she knew a certain secret relief when Kirk came home that night at the usual time.

She had made up her mind to tell him that she knew and understood everything. But she was not given a chance.

Unfolding his napkin, Kirk remarked with a twinkle. "You know that little story, I was telling you about, dear? Well, I guess you'd better not use it. Might strike too near home."

"Might strike near home!" echoed Caroline.

"Solved!"

"Darling. That's what I said. Lida Whitlock has pulled wires to get Charley transferred to St. Louis and temptation's way. Not that Patty was in love with him. She was telling me this morning all about a nice young fellow whose sister she's going to spend the week end with. Well, for the love of Mike, Caroline!"

For Caroline had run around and flung herself into Kirk's lap, weeping tears of contrition and gratitude.

The following day Caroline resigned from the Scribblers' Society. Partly because she simply did not feel up to writing (much less reading) a short story. Partly because she wanted to spend more time brushing up on music and tennis.

WILKINS' BIG THRILL CAME IN SIBERIA

EXCLUSIVE

By SIR HUBERT WILKINS
Famous explorer who crossed the Atlantic aboard the Graf Zeppelin from Friedrichshafen, and is writing the story of the Hearst-Zeppelin Round-World Flight.

(Copyright, 1929, in United States and all other countries except Continental Europe by King Features Syndicate, Inc. All rights reserved and reproduction in whole or in part prohibited. Lakehurst, N. J., Aug. 30—The Graf Zeppelin is back to its second "home" again—back to Lakehurst, where it started the Hearst-Zeppelin round-world flight. We have passed through air over lands the travelling of which would take an ordinary man the extra hundred years that only the Divine could add to his life.

Sir Hubert Wilkins

Thousands of square miles of cultivation greeted us over Siberia, which supports millions of men, and huge factory chimneys belched forth smoke which spread in crinkled streams above the land-scape.

Lots of houses studded the hills and dales, crowding the areas where years before wild game hunted and fled in terror from the spears of primitive hunters.

CHURCH NOW SCHOOL

In the district of the city of Vologda we saw the remnants of a religious-minded people. It seemed as if every city block centered around what had once been a church, and we were told that these buildings now were used for schools.

The smoke from burning undergrowth in the valleys of the Ural Mountains annoyed us a little, but when we passed through the smoke belt, we found ourselves above a wierd, eerie stretch of country. It was weary and sodden. Almost still-watered rivers meandered through the swamps, twisting, turning, biting back, and writhing like a pen of serpents intent on self-destruction.

Blocks of stunted timber on low ridges separated marshes from lakes, the bottoms of which were revealed to us at our altitude, and had probably never before been seen by man, supported only water birds and fat mud-fish, which splashed darted, startled from our shadow. That was Siberia—at its most primitive.

SIBERIA—LONELY, WILD

The mountains of East Siberia were ever so much higher than charted. The ship was tight, and Dr. Eckener decided to thread his way through rather than go over the top of them. The hours of crossing was nerve-tensing, and looked extremely dangerous, but with much ballast in hand, and a capable and responsible crew, it would have been possible to shoot up beyond the level of the mountains to certain safety. We swooped down to the sea, and the crossing of Siberia was over. That was the most important, the most impressive part of the world tour.

The most agreeable and amazing thing to everybody was the temperature experienced. Some put on overcoats on odd occasions after the heavy underwear, thick sweaters, fleece-lined sleeping bags were superfluous. The lowest temperature recorded was only 42 degrees fahrenheit. We had crossed, apparently, the most inhospitable place in the northern hemisphere, yet I would not be at all surprised if in that territory it would be quite possible to make one's living by hunting.

When eventually we arrived at Kasumigaura field, near Tokio, and were driven to the Japanese capitol, we did not have much to complain of.

And now for our departure for Tokio. After a few minutes' flight, we were over the Pacific ocean. Then we disappeared into a cloud and ran into a storm which was the most violent we had experienced on our trip. It was only of short duration, but the ship pitched steeply downward, often, rose and pitched again. The clouds looked black and threatening. It was the first time the passengers had been startled from their calm.

For many hours we flew right in the thickest of the fog. It continued that way almost all the way across the Pacific ocean, until another record was set and the Golden Gate loomed at about the time we thought we would be half way over.

BEST WAY TO TRAVEL

A comprehensive history of all the Zeppelins that have taken the air would include hope, faith and charity, comedy, drama and tragedy—in fact, all thrills and emotions known to the human race and mind.

"We have learned nothing new," said Dr. Eckener and his officers when asked if this trip had given them any new valuable information. They are certain that the Zeppelin could, barring accidents, go on doing this sort of thing every day and every week.

But the whole crew, including the commander, realize that from many points of view they have profited greatly by this venture and by the adventures we have had. We have actually been over the conditions in northern Siberia and learned about the behavior and conditions of cloud masses at the north of the Pacific Ocean.

It is impossible for me to tell exept by hearsay how long distance lighter than air travel appeals to the common man, but from my point of view it is the most pleasant, comfortable, convenient, sane and reliable method of covering distance.

In six hours less than three days we had spanned the great Atlantic, covered a vast stretch of land and then like a homing bird the Zeppelin circled the town of its birth, Friedrichshafen, and settled down to its nest.

The first record of the Hearst-Zeppelin Globe-Encircling Flight had been made. The fastest crossing of the Atlantic by airship.

At dawn on Tuesday, August 15, we again took our places at the windows and watched the great big silver cocoon slip from its resting place.

The shortest distance between the kickoff and the goal was 6500 miles. There was food for the people on board sufficient to last six days, together with some emergency rations, 10 tons of water ballast, arms and ammunition, warm clothing, etc., in case of accident.

From Wolegda we sped on hoping to be able to go northward and look down on the shores of the Arctic ocean, but again the Lord and Master Wind dictated otherwise.

We will never forget the arrival at San Francisco. First one plane arrived to escort us, then another, then a half a dozen and a dozen more. We could never agree as to how many there were.

OVER LOS ANGELES

Then the airship swung over Berkeley and Oakland, but not close enough to see the Oakland airport. Crossing the bay we sailed high over the city's residential quarter and coming in the coast near Cliff House and Seal Rocks turned and followed the coast line. The sun had been setting slowly enough to give us the most beautiful picture an esthetic mind might desire.

Then Los Angeles have into view. If dew drops sparkling in sunlight have ever made you imagine fairly land, then I'm sure your dreams could never in all your life equal in beauty the scenes of Los Angeles. It was bathed in golden gleams of moonlight. Bejewelled with myriads of sparkling light jewels. We lost all count of time, just wandered over the sparkling and shimmering vastness, then at the first break of day turned and moored softly into the arms of the waiting sailors and marines.

It was a wonderful banquet they gave us at Los Angeles. There is hardly an adjective to describe it. There was one there and he was one of us, who remained as inconspicuous as most big minded generous people do. It was Karl Von Wiegand, whose ability in organizing the matters in the Orient and elsewhere was greatly responsible for the success of the trip.

NARROW ESCAPE

Judging from our experience at Los Angeles we had the same difficulty as the great sea birds. The runway elected was not long enough for the heavy load the machine carried, but that was not the fault of the field. The six conditions were never new to the airship commanders.

The passengers, some of them expecting trouble, were in the saloon. We could feel the ship laboring and twice felt the fin astern dragging on the ground. The whole ship trembled with vibration. It was almost as if she was afraid. The bow was raised slowly but the tail hung low and as we approached the telegraph wires one among us said:

"Now watch the wires and post go down."

We verily believed that we would crash down with them. But by some miracle we seemed to have cleared and still laboring, climbed slowly up and over the water. Grey faces regained their natural color which had been frozen during the crucial moment told of feelings and commented on things in general.

Members of the fishermen's race committee, in charge of the annual race for supremacy of the north Atlantic fishing fleet, are shown making a last minute checkup of the course and rules to be followed in the sea contest. W. Norman Fisher is assistant secretary, Wilmot A. Reed, secretary; Frank R. Loeffler, treasurer, and L. J. Hart represents the Gloucester Chamber of Commerce. On the right is the Progress, smallest of the four contenders, which is conceded to have a slight advantage if weather is favorable. (Staff photos.)

Schooners Gear for Test of Speed

Gloucester, Aug. 30—Everybody was whistling in Gloucester today—whistling for wind.

And four of the fastest fishing schooners in the North Atlantic ready for the hoisting of the blue flag which will start them on the first race of a win-two series to decide the championship of the American North Atlantic fishing fleet.

Early this morning the vanguard of a crowd that is expected to exceed 25,000 before the races start, was a mailing about the water-front of the famous old fishing city.

Yachts of all description were arriving and a fleet of Coast Guard craft was en route. When the blue flag flies at 10 a. m., tomorrow it is expected that more than 1000 private yachts and government boats will be on hand.

Under the auspices of the American Fishery's race committee, four schooners will contest tomorrow, Sunday and Monday, at least, and Tuesday, if, by chance, the first three races should go each to a different boat.

In any event, a third will be held Labor Day.

The contenders are Progress, Arthur D. Story, Elsie and Thomas S. Gorton.

The Frank E. Davis silver trophy, the Col. and Mrs. John W. Prentiss Winner's Cup and $4000 in cash hinges upon the result.

To the winner will go one leg on the Davis Trophy, which must be won five years by one boat for permanent possession, the Prentiss Cup for keeps, $1500 cash prize and $500 cash prize for crew distribution.

Second boat in will receive $1000 cash prize and $300 cash crew prize and third boat will win $500 cash prize and $200 cash crew prize.

TITLE OF HONOR

But more than cups and trophies and prize money does the fisherman value the unofficial title of fastest schooner in the fishing fleet for it gives him a 365-day excuse for hurling cods' heads at contenders on the banks.

If either Progress, Arthur D. Story or Elsie is returned the winner there will be cause for celebration at Arthur D. Story's shipyard at Essex—for he built all three. Tarr & Jones fashioned Thomas S. Gorton.

In a light breeze, Gloucester thinks, Progress will show her trim heels to her competitors. The United Fisheries schooner is the smallest contender with a gross tonnage of 117, 96 foot length over all and 23 foot beam. She was launched in 1913 at Essex.

Capt. Marty Welch, only Gloucester fishing captain ever victorious in the international races with Canada, was scheduled to handle her. He has been in ill health and has said he will not act as skipper. Capt. Manuel P. Domingos will sail her, unless Capt. Welch changes his mind.

STURDY CRAFT

The Arthur D. Story was formerly Mary and is owned by the Atlantic Supply Co. She was built in 1912, and is 140 tons, 113 feet over all with 25-footbeam. Capt. Ben Pine, grand old international-ist, whose heart has mended since Columbia sank off Sable, will be her skipper.

Elsie, owned by Frank C. Pearce Co., Gloucester, rides a keel laid at Essex in 1916. She is 135 tons, 104 feet long, 25-foot beam and will be sailed by Capt. Norman Ross

The Thomas S. Gorton of the Gorton-Pew Fisheries, is 24 years old, 140 tons, 160 feet in length with 25-foot beam. Capt. Walter Parsons will sail her and may show the others a trick or two.

The course will be twice around a triangle, a course of 37 and five eighths nautical miles, starting and ending in Gloucester harbor, between the mark buoy and the judges' boat.

The direction of the wind will determine the manner in which the course will be sailed.

To eliminate the possibility of a halves victory in a drifting match, the committee has set a time limit of seven hours on the race. So the breeze be so light that no boat finishes in that time the contest will be declared no race.

Al St. Johns Sent to the "Rock Pile"

Los Angeles, Aug. 30 (AP)—Al St. Johns, motion picture comedian, was sentenced to the county rock pile by Superior Judge Charles Burnell for failure to pay $1600 alimony to Mrs. Lillian St. Johns. He said he was supporting his parents, his present wife, Mrs. June St. Johns and their child and, out of work because of the "equity strike," could not pay.

Man Falls 60 Feet and Will Recover

He was not seriously injured. His fall was broken when he landed in a chute about 16 feet from the ground.

NOT MARRIED, BUT SEEKS A DIVORCE

Providence, Aug. 30—Mrs. Eva Crane Champagne, comely young Arctic woman, will give Judge Hugh Baker of the Superior Court a difficult problem to solve tomorrow when she asks for temporary alimony pending the hearing of her divorce case.

Mrs. Champagne bases her claim to alimony and also to a divorce on the ground she is the common law wife of Joseph W. Champagne, also of Arctic.

Champagne will contest the action. He avers that a common law marriage between the fair plaintiff and himself never existed.

The plaintiff alleges that the common law marriage has existed for more than seven years and that she has been known to, a wide circle of friends and to business people as Mrs. Joseph W. Champagne.

She asserts she wishes to separate from Champagne but recognizing the legality of the common law marriage she feels she is entitled to a divorce decree and temporary alimony.

Why Mrs. Champagne wants a divorce has not been revealed because divorce papers are impounded, in this state.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 20 (AP)—As Milton Dammann expresses it men have taken up the slack in the steel market caused when women discarded the steel corset; 3,600,000 pounds of process steel were used last year in the manufacture of razor blades. Mr. Dammann is one of the manufacturers.

'Fireproof Wood' O.K. for Stadium Stands

One of the first instances of wood being designated officially as fireproof was on record in the Boston building commission today, with a special rating for the new chemically-treated wooden stands at the north end of Harvard Stadium.

With the completion of the present construction work by the Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation, it was stated yesterday, Harvard Stadium will be able to seat close to 65,000 spectators at the football games this fall.

The old, temporary stands, which were entirely of wood, had been the subject of criticism by the Boston building department for several years. This season the Harvard authorities agreed to replace them with a fireproof structure, which is to cost about $150,000.

Wooden seats are more healthful and comfortable than steel or concrete benches would be, Commissioner Leslie K. Hourke of the building department explained, and since the wood to be used in the Harvard Stadium project has been chemically treated to resist fire, he has approved its use in construction which he has insisted shall be fireproof.

According to the engineers in charge of construction, the new stands have been designed so that the entire playing field is visible from any seat. Sections of the lower seats adjoining the stadium proper are so designed that they can be removed during track games, to leave an open straightaway for the sprints.

CLAIM BIG AREA IN LABRADOR

Montreal, Aug. 30 (AP)—Claims to parts of Labrador which he values at $80,000,000 and which are based on a perpetual grant from King William III in 1697, have been advanced by the Rev. Isaac De La Penha, a preacher in the Spanish settlement.

The existence of Mr. De La Penha's claim has revealed in connection with recent statements of Joseph de Champlain that he had been empowered by the Government of Newfoundland to negotiate the sale of Labrador to Canada.

Lee M. Friedman, a Boston attorney, and lawyers in London and Amsterdam are preparing to submit the claim to the privy council, the minister said.

Sinclair Case Up to Hoover Next Week

Washington, Aug. 30—President Hoover is expected to pass on Harry F. Sinclair's plea for freedom on his return from the Rapidan camp after the holiday.

Sinclair's attorneys are optimistic. It is said that neither the judges in the case and the district attorney have offered no objection to commuting the sentence.

The President may take one of three courses—file the recommendation or report without action, approve it or turn it down.

Our Racing Fishermen

Which Is the "Pride of the Fleet"?

A public which since 1926 has been hungry for such an event will be well represented at Gloucester tomorrow when four fishing vessels begin a three-day series of races over a 37½-mile course.

There being no international event immediately in prospect the present races are for the sole purpose of discovering the fastest boat among the Yankees. Over the radio we hear such familiar names as those of Captain Ben Pine, Captain Marty Welch and Captain Norman Ross, a guarantee that the visitor is sure to be well paid for his trouble, if any.

Gloucester being an enterprising town, of long experience in caring for the stranger, the Chamber of Commerce is setting up an information bureau, where the visitor will be told where to see the races and how to get there.

Ten Miles to the P. O.

And Sometimes—Before R. F. D. Was Established—No Letter When You Got There!

"What of it?"

ONLY this, that Mr. Moulton, who began 33 years ago, was one of the first three R. F. D. men in the country.

One of the others has passed on; the third has been pensioned.

Only 33 years and what a change Rural Free Delivery has worked in America!

In the old days, out in the country, you got your mail when you called at the Postoffice for it—five, ten or fifteen miles away.

Neighbor called to neighbor as he drove past, "See if there is any mail for us, will you, Ed? I wasn't fixin' to go to the village, today." Few telephones, then, no radio and only the weekly newspaper.

It required a long fight to get the R. F. D. established, a longer one—and much more bitter—to establish the Parcel Post.

"Gil" Moulton began with a bicycle, was graduated to a buggy, and in 1917 bought his first automobile. In his first month he carried 1400 pieces of mail, mostly letters. Last month, he toted 50,000 pieces, including chickens in crates. His salary of old was $300 per annum; now $2000.

Typifying the R. F. D. man in general, Mr. Moulton and his flivver may be said to have brought the country close up to the city line.

"Gil" and Mrs. Moulton—their old home in Sebago was built by the first Moulton in 1783—expect to winter in Florida hereafter, and summer in Maine.

Mr. Moulton has helped to make history.

Wish him luck!

An Old Conductor

What He Sees of Prohibition

(Copyright, 1929)

An old conductor on a branch road of the Pennsylvania Railroad, running from a quiet coast town in New Jersey, to a big city in Pennsylvania, and going all the way through rural districts, was asked, as a drunken man dropped into his seat, "I suppose you see that sort of thing rarely out here?"

The conductor replied "that kind of thing was VERY rare, BEFORE PROHIBITION CAME.

"Before prohibition I did not carry one drunkard a month on this branch. But since prohibition I see thirty of them in a day."

That was said by an old man nearing the age of enforced retirement, a man that had never taken a drink of alcoholic liquor in his life.

It would have enlightened the fanatical prohibitionist to hear him tell of young girls and boys getting on the train, bringing a bottle of bootleg whiskey, or more often a bottle of pure alcohol, drinking the poison, and losing their moral sense as they drank it.

We need temperance laws, in place of the present law that makes criminals rich and school children DRUNK.

Transpacific Flying Lines

Uncle Sam Should Have Them

(Copyright, 1929)

Our Government is believed to have in mind the establishment of an air line from the Pacific Coast to Honolulu at first and later all the way across the Pacific.

If anybody is to establish transpacific flying it ought to be THIS country. We have legitimate business in the Hawaiian Islands and farther away, in the Philippines, and should be able to attend to it through the air.

We should also communicate by air with our friends in China, Japan and other Asiatic points.

The problems involved doubtless interest President Hoover, who is an engineer. He has worked in China and knows how many people there are there.

ONCE-OVERS

"JUST give me anything."

This is the usual reply of a man asked what he wants for dinner.

Often it results in his wife preparing something the man does not want.

To say nothing of its being a most unsatisfactory answer to such a question.

So the wife is dissatisfied and dinner does not please Mr. Man.

Of all irksome jobs, that of cooking the same things day after day is to the housewife the worst.

There may be many dishes that she likes that she knows her husband will not touch. Naturally she wants to cook something that he will eat and enjoy. Plan to get such an indifferent reply does not help any.

Practically all men have favorite dishes, food cooked in a special way that they relish.

They would not bother their heads to suggest the next meal, but they never fail to register disgust if the meal does not suit.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug 30—Thoughts while strolling: What's became of that familiar old headline: "Bees Sting Keeper to Death"? Those women so precisely dressed a broken fingernail gives you the jumps. Round cut diamonds have gone out like a light. More "No Cover Charge" cabarets. Their last gasp.

Hatless boys with round hair cuts suggesting chrysanthemums. That little dried-up Marquis looking fellow you always see at first nights. Old harridans who parade white poodles. Dick Berlin. The biggest nuisance and the greatest convenience of modern life—the telephone. Little Jane of the radio. And Uncle Bill.

Something amusing about colored fellows who wear eye glasses with heavy black ribbons. Wonder who invented the shower bath, bless him! Carl Van Vechten, a Cedar Rapids, Iowa, boy, who made good in the city. A cafe on 47th st. features creole cooking. Japs who wear pink ties. Dorothy Stone.

Zipper rain coats. Taxicab full of revelers—Sweet Adeline-ists. Whoopee hats for little boys. Made of red felt. Bracelets are called "joyces." Seedy characters who drift out of public parks after a shower. Interior decorating schools in every block. Dean Ray, rector of the famous Little Church Around the Corner.

Trembling old wrecks who scan gutters and make furtive grabs for snipes. And happy East Side families who drive in canopied carriages through the park—all grinning. Italians with rings in their ears still sell those statues in chalk from door to door.

Lamplighted shops with romantic names. That dreary boarding house for widows of sea captains. Sign: "Wanted: Kennel Manager—$200 a Month and Board." There's a career. Vendors of phoney French post cards who peddle pictures in the dark. And in the light they turn out to be reproductions of Eiffel Tower.

From a men's fashion magazine: "The smartly dressed man this winter will wear cuff links of white baby ribbon."

Could you go for it?

In a play this season the real tense moment centers about two lady golfers putting on the 18th and deciding green. The heroine holes out successfully and if she failed the entire action of the play would go bloogy. A magnet does the trick. It is said golf fans are attracted time after time in the hope of youknowwhat.

The meanest person in the world is up to a new caper. In a little square uptown where lovers go after dark to sit on benches, t. m. P. i. t. w. has sneaked in twice lately before dusk and coated several benches with fresh paint.

A slightly potted gentleman, unable to hail a taxi during a rain, teetered over to a nearby corner where stood a block-long sightseeing bus. He paid the tariff of a full bus, gave the conductor and chauffeur $5 apiece, and was carried in state to a private home six blocks away. The bright thing.

A New York barber tells me the best jobs in America are in the cattle country of Wyoming. In the interior towns off the railroad cowmen pay $1 for a haircut and 50 cents for a shave and tips are bigger than in the best shops in New York. Living prices, also, are extremely low. Several New York barbers have gone there and remained for a year or so, returning with enough capital to start in business for themselves.

A victim of the Manhattan kitchenette-delicatessenazen life trumpets a gloat from his home town in the Middle West: "For the first time in years I have gone through a week without potato salad, mixed pickles and a rotisseria chicken."

But we bet a cookie he has had his fill of current jelly.

THE CAP OF NIGHT

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

WHAT is night? It is a shadow; the shadow of the earth. Has night a form and a location, like a geometrical body?

Yes, night is a sharp-pointed cone, and it has a fixed position in space with reference to the earth, being always opposite to the sun. It goes round the sun with the earth and never gets out of line, and the earth rotates in the bottom of the cone as in a cup, and any spot on the earth rolls into the cup on its western edge and rolls out of it on its eastern edge once every 24 hours.

The cone of night has as definite a shape as the solid globes of the earth itself, but it is changeable in length according as the earth approaches or recedes from the sun. The cone is about 8000 miles broad across its cup-shaped base, but its length varies between 845,000 and 873,000 miles, being longest in July and shortest in January.

The Earth's Night Cap.
Every Planet has its own Night.

If you could start from a spot on the earth directly opposite to the sun at midnight and swiftly mount up toward the point of the cone of night, you would at length find yourself somewhat in the fix of a chimney-sweeper crowding his way up a narrowing flue.

When you were as far above the earth as the distance of the moon there would be plenty of night-room about you, for the cone would still be about 5700 miles across. But when you neared the top, the cone would become so slender that you would be continually sticking your toes and elbows out into the sunlight.

Out in airless space the outline of the night-cap would be as sharp as the edge of a light ray, though in itself invisible, and inside it the eye would be immersed in full night just as truly as in the center of the broad base on the cone on the earth.

"Every planet thus carries its own night cap along with it as it revolves around the sun. When the moon gets exactly between the sun and the earth, causing what we call a total solar eclipse, what really happens is that the tip of the moon's night cone touches the earth.

It is in reality a bit of the moon's night cast upon the earth, in the midst of the earth's own day. Those who are within the space covered by the tip of the lunar shadow on the earth are then in lunar night though earthly daylight prevails all around them, beyond the narrow limits of the moon's shadow.

These shadows cast by the planets create the only night there is. And the night of one planet never affects another planet, except in such a case as that of the moon, where the shadow of one body is cast in such direction as to fall upon another. Night, itself, is unseable. The shadow cones in the earth directly opposite to the sun at midnight and swiftly mount up through dusty or misty space which is illuminated by surrounding lights. If interplanetary space were filled with clouds of fine dust it would be more or less luminous and then where the shadows of the planets fell there would appear as dark cones, cropping the planets.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

AMERICAN plumbing scores another victory over foreign competition.

The Turk, within his guarded tent, has quit the Turkish bath.

When the emir of Baloola, well known for his playful habit of dropping his wives into the Bosphorus, saw his first American tub, he said:

"Perfect for drowning one wife. I'll need a thousand for my harem."

So the emir got himself a thousand tubs, inlaid with turquoise and sparkling with a mosaic of rubies and amethysts.

These tubs looked like the sidecars of motorcycles, and the world will never forget the time that the prime minister of Anpastoche incurred the displeasure of the Hooga mogul of Balushistan.

The prime minister suggested that the mogul purchase an American tub for his birthday. That in itself was an insult.

The mogul bought the deep-dish bowl, filled it up and started to lather himself. In a minute the inevitable happened.

Enraged, the mogul commanded the prime ribs of Beefia to leap into the tub.

His Excellency did so. With the water up to his neck, he said, "Your most imperishable highness, what do I do next?"

The mogul said, "Hold your head under water until you run out of bubbles."

And that was the end of the prime minister. The archives gloss over the incident and intimate that the prime person was at sea. In a bathtub.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

WE hear much of the "evil of divorce" and of what a menace it is to society.

BUT MARRIAGE MAY BE AS GREAT AN EVIL—AS GREAT A MENACE TO SOCIETY, AND, STRANGELY ENOUGH, SOME OF THE "HAPPIEST" MARRIAGES HAVE THE MOST EVIL RESULTS.

For example, there are the Wilsons—Ruth and Elliott. Everyone says how "perfectly happy" they are. But, as a matter of fact, their perfectly happy marriage is about the worst thing that could have happened to them.

Six years ago, before their marriage, they were two intelligent, friendly, active young individuals, with a healthy contact with life. They were not extraordinarily talented, but life kept their minds on the move—kept their minds open and their hearts warm. Then they met each other, fell deeply in love and were married. And at once something tragic began to happen to them.

THEY BEGAN TO RUN AWAY FROM LIFE.

Like most of us, they were both a little timid, a little lazy, a little conceited. It was unpleasant for them to face criticism or tackle competition. But, when they were single, they HAD to do these things. They HAD to hustle, to make good with their jobs. They HAD to be good sports, to make good with their friends. Otherwise they would have been dropped from the ranks left alone. And they dreaded loneliness.

BUT WITH MARRIAGE THIS MENACE WAS REMOVED.

BY FORMING A MUTUAL ADMIRATION AND PROTECTIVE SOCIETY, THEY COULD GIVE WAY TO THEIR COMMON WEAKNESSES AND STILL RE MAIN "AS SNUG AS A BUG IN A RUG."

They could indulge their timidity, their laziness, their conceit and still be sure of An Admiring Audience. Which same they proceeded to do. Because it was irksome to adjust themselves to people, they stopped going about with people. Because it was tiresome to think new thoughts and change old opinions, they stopped thinking and changing and co-ordinated themselves with an exchange of smug judgments.

MARRIAGE BECAME A SORT OF GOPHER HOLE INTO WHICH THEY ESCAPED FROM LIFE. AND they, in turn, became curiously like gophers — little dwarfed natures, snuggling close together in their own darkness.

A marriage which takes people out of circulation is as disastrous as any divorce could possibly be.

Our first duty is not to be husbands and wives—but to be well-rounded individuals. WE HAVE NO RIGHT BEING SO SNUGLY HAPPY THAT WE STOP BEING HUMAN. A marriage that shuts out all conflict and criticism from real life is a deadly as dope. It is a sort of spiritual dope.

TOO MUCH TWOSOME IS DEADLY.

3-Minute Trips

By TEMPLE MANNING

REGRETFULLY we leave picturesque Coblenz to resume our journey along the swiftly flowing Rhine. Some of my fellow passengers cannot tear themselves away from the pleasant gardens and cafes that line the banks of the Rhine at this point and insist that the easiest way to learn German is to listen to and then sing the songs that sound so well when sung by throats lubricated with the refreshments for which this part of the Rhineland is so justly famous. And so we shall board the motorship "Beethoven," surely an appropriate name for the ship that is to take us to Bonn, revered by all music lovers as the birth place of Beethoven.

The next part of our journey is marked by islands and hills, many of them of volcanic origin, and there is somewhat of a change in the scenic panorama. The hills are clustered closer together, there are less valleys and more small towns and villages. As we pass Neuwied a passenger reminds me that it is the birthplace of Carmen Sylva, the late Queen of Rumania. From the boat one can see the palace of the Prince of Wied surrounded by lovely gardens. Many of the towns that we pass are health resorts, but all quaint and picturesque with their timbered houses and gabled inns. Most of them boast modern hotels, too, with window boxes filled with bright-colored flowers. But wherever you may elect to sojourn, you will find the lodgings of your choice clean, neat and comfortable.

Our steamer pauses at Andernach, where some passengers disembark to view the battlefield, famous in history as the scene of conflict between Charles the Bald of France and Louis III of Germany, which took place in 876.

After about an hour's journey the range known as the Seven Hills comes into view. The seven conical peaks that include the Drachenfels and Wolkenburg comprise a group about two and a half miles wide and stretch along the right bank of the river for a distance of over five miles. Those of you who like to live high would enjoy the fine hotel at the summit of the Drachenfels, which is reached by a cog railway, and these hilltops are becoming favorite vacation spots.

But it is at Bonn that we find the most visitors and tourists, and, really apart from its claims to fame, this glorious city deserves its ever-growing popularity. The university, the Minster or cathedral, the Beethoven Museum, the remains of the famous Neanderthal man are some of the things to be seen and reseen.

RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

SLENDER young birch tree and aspen and pine.
Willow and beech tree and oak.
Cypress where clinging gray moss loves to twine.
Hail, one and all, forest folk!

Gracious the welcome your lofty arms wave,
Cool is the shade at your feet,
Making a restful retreat.

Yet, slender birch tree and aspen and beech,
Vain is your beauty to me;
I would give all for a white, leafy peach
And the tossing green fields of the sea.

Aspen, forgive me, and willow and pine,
That your beauty is nothing to me;
Only the sea stills the longing of mine,
Only the unquiet sea.
